D. C. Income Tax Put Up To Citizens' Advisory Unit

Senator King Asks Prompt Report; Many Changes in House Measure Forecast

By James D. Secrest.

The House-approved District income tax yesterday was referred to the Citizens Advisory Tax Committee by Chairman King of the Senate District Committee for study and prompt report following an informal conference of municipal officials in King's office.

Senator King, still forecasting Senate approval of a District income tax, stated that many provisions of the House bill will have to be amended before the tax is acceptable. Public hearings will be held, he said, as soon as the Citizens Advisory Committee makes its report.

Meanwhile, a split within the Senate District Committee was foreshadowed when Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, announced that he will fight the income tax proposal on the ground that it would hit Federal employes who are, he said, "overtaxed and underpaid."

Committee Meets Today

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, chairman of the advisory committee, immediately called a meeting of the committee for 2 p. m. today as members admitted frankly that they couldn't predict what attitude the citizens' group will take.

The citizens' committee heretofore has resisted the proposal of its minority members who favor a local tax. It indorsed the 2 per cent sales tax recommended in the Pond report and shied from the business privilege levy.

A prediction that thousands of Government employes who maintain legal residences in the States will not escape the tax came from Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal.

Suburbanites Affected

Seal expressed the informal opinion that the mere act of voting does not establish a legal residence. The courts have so held, he said. Consequently, the District would attempt to collect the income tax from every bona fide resident of the Capital, he said, regardless of where he maintains a legal residence for voting purposes.

The tax would apply equally as effectively to persons living in suburban Maryland and Virginia but earning their income in the District, Seal said.

Should the States contest such a claim, he predicted, the District would fight the case in the courts.

Higher Exemption Seen

Present at yesterday's conference, besides Senator King, were Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and David McCoach, jr., Maj. Donovan, Seal and Vernon West, principal assistant corporation counsel.

Refinement of the income tax to remove inequities to small wage earners with families is obviously necessary, Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, author of the $2,000 amendment, said as the Senate District Committee received the House bill.

Amendments to allow deductions for dependents and married persons and a possible adjustment in the rate scale are certain to be made, District Committee members indicated, if the tax is retained. It is not unlikely, it was said, that the basic exemption may be raised to $2,500, and that allowances of $400 for each dependent will be adopted.

Senator Capper, ranking minority member of the District Committee, gave the income tax his qualified

When it stalled in the ford at the Klingle road entrance to the Zoo at the height of the storm yesterday, this auto was swept 600 feet down Rock Creek

38-Mile Winds Buffet District; Intersections and Cellars Flooded; Traffic Tied Up, Air Travel Interrupted

A lashing thunderstorm, driven by near-gale winds, swept across Washington late yesterday, tied up auto and air travel for nearly an hour, flooded cellars throughout the city, and tore down a number of trees.

An inch and a quarter of rain fell on the city in the first hour of the storm, the heaviest rainfall here since last summer.

One automobile, abandoned by its driver when it stalled in the Zoo ford across Rock Creek, was rolled 200 yards downstream and toppled on its side, almost submerged near the Harvard street bridge.

L. W. Catlett, of 4704 Seventeenth street northwest, president of the Potomac Riding Stable, said the car stalled in the ford. Catlett waded out of the stream to seek help, then waded back to the car to rescue Mickey, his Scotch terrier. As the dog was pulled free the car slid into the current, turned over and over down the swollen stream.

Eight-year-old Allen McKeaver, of 10 Locust avenue, Hyattsville, Md., was struck by an auto on the Washington - Baltimore boulevard while crossing the road during the downpour. Taken to Casualty Hospital by the Bladensburg rescue

House Limits TVA to Deals Under Way

Area Strictly Defined; Bond Issue Slash Expected to Doom Tepco Purchase

By the Associated Press.

The Tennessee Valley Authority lost a bitter fight late yesterday when the House approved a measure placing drastic limitations on its future operations.

TVA supporters said the measure also would endanger a $78,000,000 deal under which Tennessee Electric Power Co. properties would be bought by the public agency.

The House voted to reduce, from $100,000,000 to $65,000,000, a bond issue to be floated to finance the deal. It wrote in amendments to a Senate bill to restrict TVA to a specific territory in the mid-South and prohibit it from reimbursing States and counties for the tax losses suffered through retirement of private utilities from the area.

Final passage of the legislation came on a voice vote. Immediately before the final action, the House voted, 191 to 167, to substitute its own amendments for the Senate bill.

Deal Held Doomed

The bonds authorized for issuance under the House measure, a complete change from the Senate bill, would be obligations of the Federal agency, but would not carry the guarantee of the United States Government.

The House legislation, carried to passage by a coalition of Republicans and Democrats opposed to public power sales, so revised the $100,000,000 Senate proposal that Administration leaders said there was no prospect of favorable Senate action.

Representatives Sparkman (Democrat), of Alabama; Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Chandler (Democrat), of Tennessee, supporters of the TVA, said "this action means the TEPCO deal can not be consummated, and that duplicating municipal distribution systems will be built—this means destruction of investments of TEPCO stockholders."

Power Trust Blamed

"The friends of the power trust," Chandler charged, "have stabbed public power investors in the vitals."

On the other hand, Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, declared that TVA had set out to "confiscate and destroy" the private power company and had forced it to make the $78,000,000 sale contract with "its back to the wall." He declared that now TVA directors "have their eyes on Cincinnati, on St. Louis, on Louisville, Ky."

Under the House measure TVA purchases of private utilities are restricted to territories now served, plus the territories served by TEPCO and 27 counties in north Alabama and Mississippi, where TVA has been negotiating for other private power properties. All other operations would be restricted to territory drained by the Tennessee River.

Another provision would subject TVA's accounts to review of the

3,000 British Blockaded By Japan

Military Attache Accused as Spy; Major Seized for Taking Pictures

By the United Press.

Tientsin, China (Wednesday), June 14.—Japanese troops began an armed blockade of the British and French concession here at 6 a. m. today, isolating more than 110,000 persons—several thousands of them Occidentals—from Tientsin proper and the outer world.

The Japanese action, risking serious trouble with the Western powers, was taken in reprisal for the refusal of British authorities to surrender four Chinese whom the Japanese suspect of killing a pro-Japanese Chinese customs official.

[A British officer, Maj. E. L. Lawe, was arrested at Tientsin aboard the passenger ship Peking Maru by Japanese gendarmes and charged with photographing Japanese-occupied areas, according to the Associated Press.—Editor's note.]

In a last-minute effort at some sort of compromise arrangement to prevent the blockade British authorities proposed that a special conciliatory court be formed, including one Briton, one Japanese and one neutral, to decide whether the Chinese should be delivered. These efforts failed, placing Britain in the most difficult position she has faced during the two years of the Sino-Japanese conflict. In recent months Japanese - British relations have worsened rapidly.

3,000 Britons Encircled

Within the British concession, encircled by barbed-wire blockades, are 3,000 Britons, 2,000 other foreigners and 45,000 Chinese, all of whom faced the threat of being held incommunicado indefinitely except for a few officials who would be permitted to leave and enter.

The French concession, along the Hai Ho (sea river) which runs from Tientsin to the port of Taku, on the sea, contains about 1,000 French and 60,000 Chinese.

Japan found it necessary to extend the blockade order to include the French concession, despite the absence of any French-Japanese dispute, because only in such a manner could a blockade of the British settlement be made effective.

The Japanese have refused all British demands for the release of Lieut. Col. Christopher R. Spear, British military attache arrested at Kalgan and charged with espionage.

British Envoy Guarded

Mystery still surrounded extraordinary precautions taken in Shanghai to guard the British Ambassador, Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, after a reported plot against his life.

Five detectives guarded the Ambassador in his office, Chinese policemen guarded the embassy office building. Policemen, detectives and kilted Seaforth Highlanders guarded Kerr's residence, and wherever he went detectives with pistols and wearing bullet-proof vests accompanied him.

The Japanese blockade was of importance to every nation, including

By Inez Robb.
International News Service Staff Writer.

Moncton, New Brunswick, June 13.—King George and Queen Elizabeth, delighted beyond measure by the success of their Canadian-American visit, are considering a similar trip for their two young daughters, Princess Elizabeth, heiress to the throne, and Princess Margaret Rose.

Not only has the possibility of such a momentous voyage for the princesses been discussed before staff members aboard the royal train but the royal parents have even considered ways and means. Dates and details are necessarily vague, however.

Princess Elizabeth, who recently celebrated her thirteenth birthday, must do any extensive traveling before she comes of age at 18 and becomes an integral part of the state picture.

Like all parents, Their Majesties are confronted with the fact that nothing is so broadening as travel. To date, neither of the young princesses has ever been outside the British Isles.

Such a trip would be by no means a "royal tour," with the panoply of a royal train. If the two princesses are sent to see the New World, as their parents earnesly desire, every effort will be made to keep it on the basis of a sight-seeing tour.

Their Majesties feel that a couple of Pullman cars, converted into

Neutrality Bill Reported 12-8; Leaders Poll House

Vote Follows Party Line; Floor Action Next Week; Senate Unit Meets Today

By Robert C. Albright

The House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday reported favorably the Administration's neutrality bill repealing arms embargo provisions of the present law and opening American markets to trade with belligerents who acquire title to goods before shipment.

Dividing along party lines, 12 Democrats voted for the measure while eight Republicans answered "No." Two Republicans, Barton, of New York, and Stearns, of New Hampshire, voted "present." Three absent Democrats were unrecorded.

Carrying State Department indorsement, the bill is expected to be called up in the House late next week under an open rule. A poll meanwhile was being conducted to determine House sentiment for the measure in advance of a showdown.

Senate to Clear Decks

A sharply-divided Senate Foreign Relations Committee, meanwhile, will meet today to consider fixing a date for Senate committee action. Faced with the threat of filibuster by mandatory-neutrality bloc Senators, leaders were preparing to clear the decks of all other major legislation early in June and then drive for passage of the neutrality measure—the last major obstacle to adjournment.

Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, acting chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, meanwhile, was authorized by his committee to go before the House Rules Committee and ask a rule providing House right of way for the measure reported yesterday.

He said it meets "the universal desire of the people of the United States to keep our country from becoming involved in foreign war."

Follows Hull's Ideas

Following closely the recent recommendations of Secretary of State Hull, the bill not only repeals present law provisions for an automatic embargo on arms and munitions shipments to belligerents in wartime, but provides trade in these and other commodities may continue if title first is transferred to the foreign purchaser.

Once the President had proclaimed a state of war between foreign nations, it automatically would become unlawful for Americans to travel on belligerent vessels. Vested with broad discretionary powers, the President would be authorized to prohibit movement of American vessels through areas of "combat operations" defined by him.

The bill specifically bans loans and credits to countries at war, closely restricts solicitation or collection of funds for use of belligerents, prohibits arming of American vessels engaged in commerce with nations at war, empowers the President to deny United States ports to submarines or armed merchant vessels of belligerent countries and continues the present Munitions Control Board.

Fish, Tinkham Lead Fight

Republican committeemen, led by Representatives Fish, of New York, and Tinkham, of Massachusetts, bitterly had fought repeal of the arms embargo, claiming it would operate to the advantage of Britain and France in any world conflict. Administration spokesmen have not denied that, but have pointed out privately that failure to repeal it would definitely work to the advantage of totalitarian powers not in control of the seas.

The committee fight for repeal actually was won in two test votes early last week, but final action was blocked by a coalition of Republicans and Democrats on eve of

Corporate Tax Bill Studied For Loopholes

Roosevelt Reveals Scrutiny as Committee Drafts New Levies

As a House Ways and Means Committee tentatively completed work on a new corporate tax bill, President Roosevelt yesterday disclosed Administration studies are in progress to guard against tax evasion loopholes.

Adding three minor changes to a measure already providing for repeal of the undivided profits tax and substitution of a flat 18 per cent corporate levy, the House subcommittee placed the bill in the hands of draftsmen, preparatory to final Ways and Means Committee action late this week.

Apparently satisfied with removal of major tax "irritants" to business, Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee said he did not plan to "open up" the measure materially when it reaches his committee.

House leaders plan to call up the bill for House action early next week, and Senate Majority Leader Barkley set July 1 as the deadline for Senate action. Nuisance levies, continued in the bill, expire June 30. Harrison indicated he will lay aside pending social security act amendments, if necessary, to speed enactment.

Indicating he was satisfied with revenue yields of the proposed measure, President Roosevelt, meanwhile, told reporters his Treasury and Justice Department aides

WPA Head Hits Curbs as New Bill Is Drafted

Limiting Projects to $25,000 Would Ruin Program, He Asserts

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, defended the Federal work relief organization before a House investigating committee yesterday, without having any material effect on the 1940 relief bill scheduled to be taken up on the floor of the House today.

Immediately after hearing the administrator, the committee met in executive session as the appropriations sub-committee handling relief made some last-minute technical changes in the new bill and sent it to the printer. The measure is expected to make considerable alteration in the structure of WPA.

Offering a rebuttal to testimony previously given the committee, Col. Harrington vigorously attacked at least two proposals believed to be contained in the new relief measure.

Limitation of all WPA construction projects to those costing not more than $25,000 "would practically wreck the program now in operation," the administrator informed the committee. He warned that sponsors would attempt to evade such a restriction by submitting the separate items of a combined undertaking as individual projects.

"The resulting confusion and waste would be enormous," said Harrington.

In pleading for continuation of all the Federal arts projects, the Senate Votes Wider Powers To D. C. Realty Commission

Bills to broaden the powers of the Real Estate Commission and to increase the number of midshipmen appointees from the District from 5 to 15 were among 13 local measures which the Senate passed yesterday on the consent calendar.

Principal objective of amendments to the real estate licensing act is to bring business chance salesmen under the same law and regulations that govern real estate brokers and their salesmen. It now goes to the House.

The bill would reduce the license fee for realty brokers from $50 to $30, change the rate of compensation of members of the Real Estate Commission and prohibit offering of free lots or prizes in connection with sale of property.

The measure to increase the number of appointments to the Naval Academy was reported by the Naval Affairs Committee and is designed to place the Capital on a par with States in representation at Annapolis.

It would restrict appointments in 1940 and 1941 to five, however, so the District would not have 15 appointments every fourth year and none in the intervening years. Another amendment would require that every appointee must have been an actual resident of the District for five years.

This bill also must be approved by the House before it becomes a law.

Seven minor bills passed by the Senate go to the White House for the President's signature as they

Murphy Reported Ready to Abandon Alcatraz Prison

By International News Service.

Attorney General Murphy soon will appoint a committee to effect abandonment of Alcatraz Federal Prison in San Francisco Bay, it was reliably reported yesterday.

The committee, composed of penologists, criminologists and prison administrators, would be asked to recommend the most efficient methods for closing the renowned "rock," and transporting its inmates to another locality.

Murphy denounced the island prison a week ago as "a place of horror," and termed the system under which it necessarily operates "essentially vicious."

He announced at that time the desire of the Justice Department to abandon the institution and replace it by a more adaptable prison in another locality.

Josephine Roche Reported Offered Welfare Post

Usually well informed New Dealers yesterday said President Roosevelt has offered the $12,000 post of Federal welfare administrator to Josephine Roche, a Vassar girl turned coal mine operator who formerly was an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

If Miss Roche declines, they understood, the appointment will go to Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board

Ten-year-old Charles Patman has received a third blood transfusion in four weeks from his father, Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, and prepared for one today from his brother, Connor, 18.

The youngster is suffering from rheumatic fever, Patman said. Ill more than two months, he has shown improvement since receiving the first transfusion. His condition was described as "satisfactory."

How the boy contracted the malady and just how to treat it was puzzling physicians, the father added, explaining the transfusions were given to build up his son's general resistance to the disease.

Paraguay Gets $500,000 Credit To Back Currency

By the Associated Press.

The United States moved yesterday to strengthen its ties with South America by granting Paraguay's request for credits to aid in economic reconstruction.

Paraguay obtained credits of $500,000 for stabilization of its currency and expansion of commerce with the United States.

In addition, the Export-Import Bank promised to aid in financing Paraguay's public works program by extending credits to United States manufacturers and exporters of equipment and materials.

Pay Deadlock Snags Building Strike Peace

Employers Willing to Negotiate but Oppose Wage Increases

Hope for an early settlement of the strike by carpenters and building laborers collapsed last night when the Master Builders Association opposed granting the unionists any increase in wages or shortening of hours which would increase the cost of construction in this jurisdiction.

The eight-day walkout of the building laborers and the two-day walk out by the carpenters have virtually halted all work on the new Government Printing Office annex, National Cancer Institute and the Jefferson Memorial.

Meanwhile, a strike by 600 bakers was averted earlier yesterday when Bakers' Union 118 and the Employing Bakers Association agreed to a new wage-hour rate at a meeting with Edward C. McDonald, Labor Department conciliator.

The builders, according to their executive secretary, Frank J. Sheehan, expressed a willingness to negotiate with the unionists.

Fifty contractors attended the meeting, Sheehan said, and a poll among them revealed that they had 1,283 carpenters on their pay rolls at the time of the walkout Monday.

Building of the National Cancer Institute is 25 days behind schedule, it was learned yesterday. Three weeks' work have yet to be done on the Jefferson Memorial foundations before construction of the super-

Gestapo Chief Sent to End Czech Terror

Six Women Slain Mysteriously in Seething Bohemia

By the United Press.

Prague, June 13.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler tonight sent the chief of his dreaded Gestapo secret police, Heinrich Himmler, to Prague after disclosure of the recent murders of six women added a new and mysterious element to spreading Czech resistance against Nazi rule.

One of the women was a German subject, employed as a housekeeper in the southern Bohemian village of Wodnian, and another was revealed by post mortem to have been buried alive.

Himmler arrived unannounced with German Minister of Justice Franz Guertner. Himmler is the man who "restored order" in Austria, the Sudetenland and Memel.

Guertner, it was believed, probably would confer with local German authorities on punitive measures.

The Wodnian housekeeper was discovered with her head battered in and her body slashed with a knife. The girl buried alive was Helene Kospert, whose body was found in an orchard near the village of Kuttenberg. A youth was arrested on suspicion of killing her.

At the village of Zwol, near Prague, the charred remains of a girl believed to be a Slovakian were found.

At Oberbris, near Pilsen, a 34-year-old woman was found shot to

Guns Quell Prisoners' Revolt For Silk Panties and Snacks

By the Associated Press.

Lansing, Kans., June 13.—A "silk underwear" revolt of 229 luxury-loving convicts in a Kansas State penitentiary coal mine was quelled today by a new warden who answered their demands with a show of machine guns and tear gas.

The prisoners surrendered four hours after they had sent up demands for continued privileges, including bedtime snacks in their cells and the right to wear silk next their skin, as the price of their work.

Mine Superintendent Robert Murray and 20 guards were captured by the miner-convicts this morning soon after they descended into the mine. Murray was sent up to convey the demands, which included rescinding of the warden's order forbidding prisoners to speculate by buying the coal produced by other prisoners in excess of their regular quotas.

Warden Milton F. Amrine rejected all demands, except that convicts would be permitted to wear out the silk underwear purchased previously at the prison commissary. He sent down 20 more guards and ordered them to shoot if necessary.

The strikers were brought up from the 722-foot deep shaft and marched to their cells minus their lunch.

Amrine was appointed by Gov. Payne Ratner, Republican, who succeeded Democratic Gov. Walter Huxman.

Reserve Board Advisers Hit Mead Loan Bill

Three Leading Bankers Warn of 'Unsound' Small Business Aid

Chief officers of the Federal Advisory Council, law-made consultant to the Federal Reserve Board on business and credit conditions, yesterday warned the Senate Banking Committee not to approve legislative machinery which would make "unsound" loans to small business.

Three council members opposed the Mead bill for insurance of long-term loans to small business by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Appearance Is Unusual

The trio appeared before the committee as spokesmen for the council, which, in itself, was unusual. The council meets with the Reserve Board four times a year and submits recommendations, which are wholly advisory. The conferences are secret and nature of the discussions is not revealed. It is well known, however, that the council and the board have not seen eye to eye in recent years.

Reserve Board Chairman Marriner S. Eccles recently appeared before the committee and recommended, as a substitute for the Mead bill, the creation of an industrial loan corporation or bank to make and insure small business loans.

It was intended to be a more liberal proposal than the Mead bill, which Eccles said would be ineffective. He admitted, however, that the plan had not received approval of the Reserve Board.

The three council members, who represent the Reserve banks of their districts, insisted that, although enterprise or risk money has remained in hiding for a long time, there is no "gap" in the financial mechanism so far as bank loans are concerned. Eccles spoke of such a gap in his testimony.

There is no large "justifiable" demand for bank credit which is not being met, they declared.

Bank Timidity Explained

Brown, for the council, gave three reasons for the timidity of venture money: The feeling that there is less chance for profit under existing political, world and business conditions; the fact that, if an investor makes money, the Government will take a large share of it in taxes, or if he loses will give him a limited deduction against taxable income, and the registration requirements and regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission, particularly with regard to small issues down to a $100,000 minimum. He suggested that this lower limit might be raised.

He said too many banks were ready to make unsound loans just to boost their own communities, or for political or other reasons, and he warned that the Mead bill did not specifically require that there should be a reasonable prospect for repayment of all insured loans.

To make unsound loans to keep a badley managed or uneconomic enterprise alive, he declared, is a species of unfair competition against all the concern's competitors. He recalled a radio manufacturing company which he said the RFC kept alive in this way to prevent its employes from being thrown out of work. The company, he said, sold radios at less than cost of manufacture and disrupted the expansion and re-employment plans of its competitors.

Careful Study Urged

The council members urged the committee to make a thorough investigation of the needs of small business for money before initiating legislation to provide for a new type of industrial loan or lending agency.

"You cannot get the truth," Brown declared, "by taking the ex parte statements of small business people who have been denied loans, however honest they may be. The only way to approximate the truth is to have somebody capable of forming a judgment hear both sides."

Loeb commented: "Some people say there has been too much reform and that this explains why there is an absence of risk money now, but how do we know? Put some objective investigators to work and find out."

He stressed that a ten-year loan is a "risk" and not "credit," and added: "We will never understand this problem unless we use correct terms."

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, June 13.—Vice President John N. Garner's popularity with Democratic voters as a possible candidate for 1940 has leveled off slightly in recent weeks, while James A. Farley's popularity has increased sharply, according to the results of a new Nation-wide survey of Democratic voters by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Despite Farley's gains, which coincide with his recent tour of the country to sound out New Deal sentiment, Garner continues to lead the field by a wide margin, with nearly three times as many preference votes as his nearest rival. Farley is second and Secretary of State Cordell Hull third.

The survey was conducted among a cross-section of Democratic voters who were asked to name the candidate they would like to see elected President in 1940 in case Franklin D. Roosevelt does not run. More than half said they had formed no opinion at the present time. Among the remainder with opinions, the leading choices today, as compared to a similar survey last month, follow:

TODAY

1. John N. Garner	47%
2. James A. Farley	16
3. Cordell Hull	12
4. Harry Hopkins	5
5. Paul V. McNutt	3
6. Henry A. Wallace	3
7. Frank Murphy	3
8. Bennett Clark	2
9. Alben W. Barkley	1
10. Joseph P. Kennedy	1
All Others	7

1. John N. Garner	50%
2. Cordell Hull	13
3. James A. Farley	9
4. Harry Hopkins	3
5. Paul V. McNutt	3
6. Frank Murphy	3
7. Henry A. Wallace	2
8. Bennett Clark	2
9. Alben W. Barkley	2
10. Herbert H. Lehman	2
All Others	11

Many unknown and unforeseen factors lie ahead in the year that remains before the Democratic nominating convention. Opinion may be changed sharply by platform fights, campaign speeches, radio broadcasts, news reel appearances, etc., which give the public additional opportunities to appraise candidates. Much depends, too, on whether President Roosevelt decides to run again. Furthermore, a party's candidate is not nominated by popular vote, but by convention delegates, who do not always pick the popular man.

Nevertheless, Vice President Garner's steady popularity with the rank and file of Democratic voters makeh him a powerful factor in any speculation about the 1940 Democratic nomination.

The sudden spurt in Farley's popularity since last month, putting him into second place, has come chiefly from the East Central and West Central States and the Far West, areas which he touched in his recent much-publicized political tour.

It is interesting to note that of the six leaders receiving the highest vote in the survey today, five are members of the Cabinet. From the ranks of Senators, Congressmen or New Deal State Governors throughout the Nation, no oustanding Democratic candidate has yet emerged.

Act Distorted To Oppress Labor, Green Declares

By the United Press.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor reiterated before the House Labor Committee yesterday that the National Labor Board has distorted the Wagner act into an instrument of labor oppression and demanded that the act be changed immediately to avert destruction through a swing "too far to the right."

Green testified on A. F. of L.-sponsored amendments proposed by Representative Graham Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, while Robert T. Caldwell, counsel for the American Rolling Mills Co., Ashland, Ky., was charging before the Senate Education and Labor Committee that labor board trial examiners frequently reverse themselves to uphold the contentions of labor.

A. F. Crystal, New York, attorney for the Moore-McCormack Lines and its affiliate, the Mooremack Gulf Lines, told the committee that the two companies had been victims of "unjust, harsh and oppressive" labor board policies.

W. A. Edelblut Heads Washington Early Birds

William A. Edelblut, president, heads the list of officers of the Early Birds of Washington elected yesterday at a 8 a. m. breakfast at the Willard Hotel. Other officers are Frank Romer, vice president; T. Kelley Back, treasurer; A. C. Mellichampe, secretary, and Edward T. Stafford, corresponding secretary. Thomas L. Egan and Lewis R. Potts were elected to the board of directors for three-year terms.

C. I. O. Weighs Legal Steps Against A. F. L.

Court Appeal Urged As Lewis Forecasts 'Black Reaction' Wave

By the Associated Press.

The C. I. O. executive board, summoned here to prepare for a new organizing drive in the Nation's big industries, was asked yesterday to authorize use of injunction and damage suits in the war against the rival American Federation of Labor.

Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel, said such legal actions would be aimed at A. F. L. boycotts against products manufactured by C. I. O. workers and "collusive contracts" signed by employers and A. F. L. unions to freeze out the C. I. O.

Higher Age Pensions Urged

The proposal to carry on the labor war through the courts was made in one of a series of reports to the board. Another report urged that Congress amend the social security act to pay a maximum of $60 a month pensions to persons 60 years of age and older, with supplementary allowances for wives, which would increase the maximum to $90.

Earlier in the day John L. Lewis, C. I. O. leader, had denounced industry, Congress and the Government in general on the ground that they had failed to cure economic ills which breed "black reaction" and "fascism."

Declaring that "11,000,000 able-bodied workers" are unemployed, he said Congress had done "worse than nothing" to solve this problem. He asserted that agencies of Congress had been busying themselves "tearing the vitals" out of measures for the unemployed.

Sees 'Black Reaction'

In a keynote speech to the board, he declared:

"I do not think the people will much longer have patience with the nostalgia and the reaction of the powers of corporate business.

"Nor will they be content with the timid solutions offered by Government, solutions fearfully withdrawn before they can be really tested."

Lewis told his leaders that the nation needed courageous leadership to ward off the "danger of being engulfed by a wave of despair and black reaction."

Landon Predicts Roosevelt Will Not Run Again

Boston, June 13 (AP).—Alf M. Landon, unsuccessful Republican nominee in the last Presidential election, predicted today President Roosevelt would decline to become a candidate for a third term. He declared:

"The citizens who are proposing and urging a third term for President will be marked by the future historian as bringing disaster to the Republic if they succeed in their unworthy ends. . . .

"The President, worthy of the trust reposed in him by his fellow citizens, will disdain this suggestion made to him by meaner souls."

McGehee to Resume Loans Law Hearings

Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, yesterday said he will call his sub-committee together within a few days and resume hearings on the proposed small loans law for the District.

"I'm going to get that bill out of committee and on the House floor in time to have it enacted into law this session," he said.

Admiral William Leahy Is Confirmed By Senate as Governor of Puerto Rico

LEAHY

It also confirmed the nomination of Herbert E. Gaston, of New York, to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

John L. Sullivan, of New Hampshire, was approved as an assistant to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

President Roosevelt signed the bill appropriating $1,750,000 for fighting grasshopper pests in Western farm areas.

The Senate approved and sent to the House legislation designed to permit authors to protect copyrights after the expiration of 28 years, when their writings have been published under general newspaper or magazine copyright without separate registration.

Under existing law authors often are unable to renew copyrights on matter published in newspapers or magazines which have gone out of existence.

The House Immigration Committee approved the bill by Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, for deportaton of aliens convicted of espionage, sabotage or of violating the narcotic laws.

The Senate approved and transmitted to the House a road beautification bill sponsored by Senator McNary (Republican), of Oregon, which would permit the use of 5 per cent of Federal road aid funds for acquisition of forest lands adjacent to highways built with Federal money. Expenditures for the purpose would be matched by the States.

Senate and House conferees agreed on legislation postponing until January 1, 1941, the effectiveness of labeling provisions of the food and drug act. Other provisions become effective July 1.

The Senate passed and sent to the House a bill directing the Secretary of Agriculture to speed up 1938 benefit payments to farmers who participated in the 1937 crop control program.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, author of the legislation, said recently technical details of compliance by farmers had been used to delay payments.

The Senate bill directs payments to be made "without reference to claimed refunds, alleged indebtedness, overpayments, mistakes in compliance or other errors for the year 1937."

Sub-Committee Approves Morris

A sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday voted to report favorably the nomination of James W. Morris, of Florida, for the United States District Court.

The appointment fills the second and final vacancy created by the enlargement of the court last session. The sub-committee comprised Senators King (Democrat), of Utah, and Norris (Republican), of Nebraska.

Income Tax Gets Approval Of D.C. Leaders

Several Interviewed Suggest Modification In Proposed Levy

The District income tax as passed by the House Monday met with varying reactions from Washington business, civic and labor leaders, who were interviewed yesterday.

A poll of representative citizens revealed support for eliminating the business privilege and intangible personal property taxes. But many were of the opinion that the exemption figure for incomes should be set at $2,500 instead of $2,000 as now provided. Other thought it was passed with too little attention for detail.

L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, was confident the House bill will not stand in the Senate.

Sees Change in Bill

"I hardly believe," he said, "that the bill as passed by the House will be the final measure. Further modifications are necessary; it is too severe now and in my opinion was not well thought out. I favor an income tax—but not of this type."

Other comment follows:

Lawrence Williams, president, Washington Board of Trade: "We have gone on record for the principles in the Pond report which includes sales tax and higher exemption level and will continue to fight for them when the bill comes up in the Senate. I favor a sales tax if for no other reason than that everyone thereby is going to share the cost of the District government—and that applies to visitors as well as residents."

Fred Allen, tax assessor for the District: "I heartily favor the income tax principle and even with the low exemption figure, the poor man will be protected because it won't really start to hurt until after the $3,000 income bracket."

Minor Changes Suggested

Arthur L. Schoenthal, vice president, Washington Building Trades Association and member of Minimum Wage Board: "The bill as passed by the House is in accord with our idea of a fair tax bill for the District. Organized labor will certainly consider this an improvement."

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Citizens Committee for Fair Taxation: "The bill will need minor adjustments in only two respects. First, by allowing personal exemptions for single and married persons and for dependents. Second, by removing the unjustified limitations placed on both the Federal payment and the property tax rate. The interests of the people of the District will best be served if the Senate approves the measure with these modifications."

David Cushman Coyle, member Citizens Advisory Committee for Fair Taxation: "I am very much delighted to pay this form of tax, instead of the various indirect forms of taxes which were included in the District bill reported out by the fiscal sub-committee. An income tax is the cheapest and most intelligent kind of tax there is and is a good deal better for business."

Intelligent Action

Harry Wender, president, Southwest Citizens Association: "In all its history, the House has not taken any more intelligent or democratic action than it took Monday in passing an income tax for the District and rejecting the totally indefensible and unfair business privilege and intangible personal taxes. I am in favor also of the exemption of members of Congress, since their incomes are in any case too low for the services they perform, and since they are required by law to maintain residences in their home States."

Sidney R. Katz, secretary, D. C. Industrial Union Council, C. I. O.: "The House action in striking out the gross receipts tax and providing for a fair income tax is highly to be commended. This action is in the best interests of organized labor and consumers generally. They will pay less under a fair income tax than the sales tax originally proposed."

Wilkerson Hails Bill

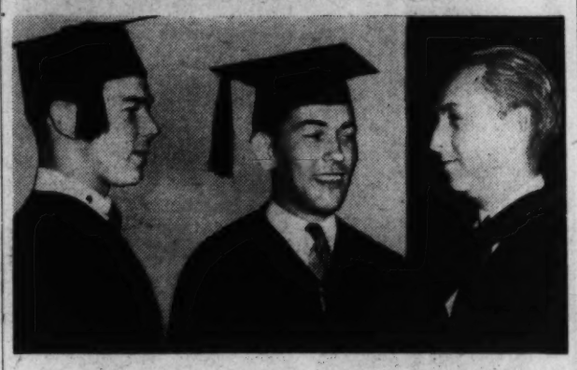

Woolsey Hall, former president, Federation of Civic Associations: "The business-privilege tax was a farce. I am in favor of the graduated income tax which spreads the burden uniformly. The bill will need a little modification of personal exemptions."

Doxey A. Wilkerson, chairman, steering committee of the joint citizens' committee: "I hail with enthusiasm the progressive tax bill passed by the House and heartily approve of the low exemption figures and defeat of the proposed sales tax."

Francis J. McDonald, former president of the Dahlgren Citizens Association: "I am satisfied with action of the House and think it should be commended."

Love Country, Judge Curran Tells Catholic U. Graduates

Class Day at Catholic University was a happy day for Bert A. Ameche, brother of Don Ameche, radio and screen star, who will receive a bachelor af arts degree at graduation ceremonies and who did receive a kiss from Rita Vernon, a girl friend. Lower—Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran (right), of the class of '27, congratulates Lewis H. Lanman (left), president of the engineering class, and Richard E. S. Boss, jr., valedictorian

Judge Edward M. Curran of the Police Court yesterday told the graduating class of Catholic University that they were entering on "a new life of study, more earnest and more effectual than that which is followed within academic walls."

Speaking at class day exercises in McMahon Hall, he urged his hearers to "ponder on your duties to the State." The first duty is love of country, he declared. In this college graduates have an even greater responsibility than others, he said, deploring the "attitude of the modern citizen toward legally constituted authority," which "seems to be one of hostility, one of disrespect, one of contempt."

The Rev. Patrick J. O'Connor, acting dean of men, read the roll call of graduating seniors, and the Right Rev. Josepr Corrigan, S. T. D., rector of the university, presided.

The dean's list was read by the Very Rev. James Marshall Campbell, dean of the college of arts and sciences, and Anthony James Scullen, dean of the school of engineering and architecture, read the list of awards. The valedictory was read by Richard E. S. Boss, jr.

The awards, presented by the rector, were as follows:

The Engineers' Club plaque—Richard E. S. Boss, of Washington.

Junior membership in the American Society of Civil Engineers—Clement H. McCormack, of Great Falls, Mont.

American Institute of Chemists' medal and membership in the institute—Lewis H. Lanman, of Washington.

Junior membership in the American Society of Mechanical Engineers—Anthony R. Bayer, of Washington.

Anonymous cash award of $25 to the senior in the college of arts and sciences with the highest scholastic standing—Paul Eldridge, of Washington.

American Institute of Architects' medal and volume to the outstanding senior in architecture—Everett G. Fellinger, of Washington.

Henry Adams Fund volume presented by the same institute to the second ranking senior in architecture—Bert H. Ameche, Reseda, Calif.

Degrees will be awarded at commencement exercises at 10:30 a. m. today.

Budget Bureau Delay Cuts Police Pensions

Tomorrow's Payment To Be 60 Per Cent; No Funds for June 30

Failure of the Budget Bureau to act on a deficiency item of $60,000 to help meet the pension pay rolls of the Police and Fire Departments for this month will result in a 60 per cent payment in the first half and probably nothing in the second half of the month, it developed yesterday.

Not only are retired members of both departments affected, but also widows, children and, in one case, a mother of a deceased member of the Fire Department.

Total number of beneficiaries affected is 1,100, of which 700 are listed under the Police Department and 400 under the Fire Department.

Pending Since March

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor and budget director, yesterday reported to the Commissioners he had submitted the deficiency item on March 30 and that "apparently no action has been taken by the bureau on this request."

He said "there are no funds available at this time to pay any part of the pay rolls for the second half of June."

The pension rolls for the first half of June will total $44,800 and the unexpended balance in the appropriation for 1939 is now $26,900, or 60 per cent of the total required, he said.

If the appropriation bill for 1940 were now law, funds for the pensions for next year could be used for meeting the June pay roll to such extent as might be necessary, he said.

Balance to Be Paid Later

"It does not appear, however, that the District appropriation bill for 1940 will pass Congress much earlier than June 30, if by then," he said.

"In these circumstances the auditor proposes that the pay rolls for the first half of June be paid on the basis of 60 per cent of the amounts the pensioners are severally entitled to, the balance to be paid when funds become available either in the regular appropriation act for 1940 or in a deficiency act, depending upon which first becomes law."

Gas Tank Blast Fires Shop Area; 8 Hurt, 4 May Die

Brewster, N. Y., June 13 (INS).—Eight persons were seriously hurt, four perhaps fatally, when a gas tank explosion wrecked a group of shops on Main street today and set fire to the wreckage and adjoining buildings.

Sergt. Irving Jagoda and a squad of State troopers from the Brewster barracks were first to reach the scene, carrying out the injured as ambulances and fire apparatus from Brewster and from the neighboring towns of Mahopac, Mount Kisco and Danbury, Conn., responded to alarms.

Gas filled an alley when workman dropped a tank of it and was sucked into a restaurant. The stove used for cooking apparently ignited the gas and caused the explosion.

Life Sacrificed In Plane Crash

AUDRIE KING, of Rockford, Ill., and Pilot Ray Zuelke were killed when the flier passed up a possible safe landing place on a playground and crashed on a golf course. Terrified children on the playground were spared but the plane burned with its occupants

Employers Urge Workers to Study Financial Data

Harmony in industrial relations would be promoted if employes could study their employers' financial charts, 1,000 delegates to the American Pulp and Paper Mill Superintendents Association Convention were told yesterday.

F. LeRoy Zellers, president of the association, in his message to the opening session of the three-day convention at the Wardman Park Hotel, pointed out that many firms are now supplying detailed breakdowns of each dollar of revenue to employes as well as stockholders. The practice, he said, is intended "to stem the tide of hate and destruction fostered by certain types of leaders."

One-third of the national income, or $22,000,000,000, went to Federal, State and municipal taxes in 1938, Zellers stated.

$100,000 Collection Of Coins Stolen

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach often pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

3 Prisoners Flee Governors Island

New York, June 13 (AP).—Three military prisoners at Governors Island gained temporary freedom in a daring escape today after knocking a guard senseless, seizing his pistol and leaping into the swirling waters of Buttermilk Channel.

Firemen Cut Free Child Trapped in a Grating

Rescue squad members had to work half an hour yesterday before Janet Clark, 8, of 318 D street southeast, could free her leg from a sewer covering in the playground of Dent School, South Carolina avenue southeast, yesterday.

The child was playing when her leg became jammed between the iron bars of the grate. She could not get it out and firemen were called. With the aid of a hammer and chisel they cut one of the bars. Janet was taken to Providence Hospital.

Official Recognition Sought For 1 Day in 365 for Dad

Old Dad, who sometimes considers himself a resident behind the eight ball, or behind the lawnmower or the best known frequenter of the mortgage department of the downtown bank, gets his day on Sunday.

It is not an officially recognized day, but everybody knows the third Sunday in June as Father's Day, and they all know that Dad has been remembered when he steps out behind the lawnmower, in the ensuing days, sporting that new cravat.

If Representative Leavy (Democrat), of Washington, had his way the official seal, signature and eagle of Congress would be on the day, setting it aside for the third Sunday in June. Leavy last year introduced House Joint Resolution 634, that would make the day official, but the resolution curled up and died, as Dad's bankroll often does, in the committee.

It was appropriate that Leavy should introduce the measure. He comes from Spokane, where Father's Day was invented in 1910. The originator was Mrs. John Bruce Dodd, a graduate of the Chicago Art Institute, and—last year, at least—the vice president of an undertaking establishment.

An Associated Press story from Spokane has given this background: "The story of the day's founding is the tale of a young mother inspired by the sacrifices of her own father, who reared six children, after his wife's death on an eastern Washington farm. The young Mrs. Dodd, wife of an insurance agent, was irked by the songs of the day—'Everybody Works But Father,' and 'Father, Dear Father, Come Home With Me Now, the Clock in the Steeple Strikes Twelve.'"

So she became inspired to create the Father's Day tribute once while listening to a Mother's Day sermon. The idea grew and the International Father's Day Association was formed. The aim now is to get official recognition.

Naval Building Time Cut 25%, Says President

Contract Awarded for $1,255,000 Addition To Mosquito Fleet

President said yesterday that efforts to speed up the naval building program had resulted in cutting the construction time by about 25 per cent.

Commenting at his press conference on a discussion earlier in the day with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edison, the President said they had gone into the building program and that it seemed to be going along very well. He said that everyone was much happier about the situation than a year ago.

Subchaser Contract Let

At that time, the President said, there were complaints about the length of time between a Congressional appropriation and the commissioning of ships. The most important cause of the delays, he said, was changes the Navy made in ship plans after building had started.

Meanwhile the Navy awarded a $1,255,000 contract for a 170-foot submarine chaser, largest of a new "mosquito" fleet planned to augment the fleet. The order went to the Defoe Boat & Motor Works, Bay City, Mich.

Under a $15,000,000 authorization in last year's billion-dollar naval expansion act, Navy officials expect to develop several types of high-speed small boats which can protect one coast against attack should the fleet be occupied on the other. Contracts for seven smaller craft, of designs similar to the "suicide ships" built abroad, were ordered last week.

Plane Harbor Urged

At the same time the War Department recommended the improvement of several harbors at outlying possessions in hte interest of national defense. Most important of the projects recommended by the chief of Army Engineers, Maj. Gen. Julian Schley, was for a $3,000,000 seaplane harbor near the naval base at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The Senate passed and sent to the White House legislation providing for a Coast Guard Reserve, a voluntary organization composed of owners of motorboats and yachts. It also approved and sent to the House, a bill to apply the employes' compensation act to Army reservists who become disabled in line of duty.

Italy, it was reported, wants an alliance with Spain to counter the projected British-French-Russian agreement.

death and at another village near Kuttenberg, Seelas, the body of a Slovakian peasant woman, Anna Harmanos, was found in a hay loft.

In the village of Chlinka, east of Prague, the 68-year-old mother of eight children was found slain.

Frontiers Closed

The frontiers of the protectorate were sealed. Foreign newspaper correspondents in Berlin, who had been led to believe earlier in the day that they would be allowed to make an inspection visit to Prague, were informed tonight that the German government had decided to prohibit all such visits "for the time being."

Himmler, after conferring with Baron von Neurath, protector of Bohemia and Moravia, visited several Nazi "service buildings" of the S. S. Storm-troops and the crack "Germania regiment of the S. S. Guards.

Troop Move Reported

Rumors persist, as they have for days, of German troop movements along the Polish-Slovakian border and of an impending occupation of Slovakia—to the east of Bohemia-Moravia—by German military forces.

Warsaw reported that former soldiers of the Czecho-Slovak army were fleeing across the frontier into Poland by the hundreds today, bringing reports of Nazi oppression of the Czech people and rumors of an impending German military occupation of Slovakia.

More than 4,000 officers, noncommissioned officers and men have succeeded in reaching Polish soil in recent days, it was revealed, and most of them have been disarmed and placed in a refugee camp near Cracow by Polish military authorities.

Official German quarters would not confirm the reports of the troop movements but said it was "possible" that there had been such movements as part of the German occupation of a mountainous borderline between Czech Moravia and Slovakia. This occupation was provided for in the treaty by which Germany assumed a protectorate over Slovakia.

Reliable German sources insisted that Hitler had told Newrath a week ago that under no circumstances would the form of the Bohemian-Moravian protectorate be altered.

Rome-Warsaw Rift

Berlin, June 13 (INS).—The official German news agency tonight indicated the possibility of a growing rift in Polish-Italian diplomatic relations in a dispatch dated from Warsaw.

According to the agency, which quoted political circles in Warsaw, Ambassador D. Lugoszowski has returned to the Polish capital from his Rome post and will remain there indefinitely because "there are no questions presently necessitating his presense in Italy."

Czech Legion Reported

Prague, June 13 (AP).—The organization of a so-called Czech legion in Poland—said to number 18,000—is firing the imagination of many Czechs who are "passively" opposing German domination in the protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia.

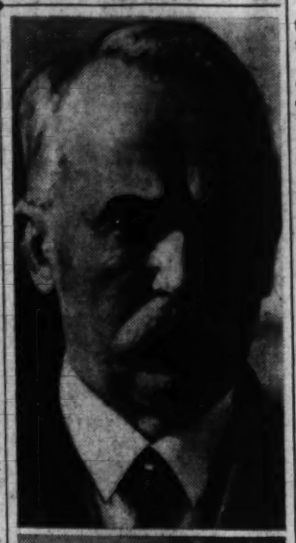

In Bohemian circles the legion was the subject of lively discussions today following reports that Votja Benes, brother of the former Czecho-Slovak President Eduard Benes, had crossed the border into Poland. (These reports were confirmed in Warsaw.)

The aims of the legion men, recruited by the Czech Gen. Vladislav Prchala and determined to campaign from abroad for "resurrection of the Czech nation," were gaining increasing attention.

Fearing disorders, officials of the Bohemia-Moravia protectorate today ordered postponement at the last minute of funeral services for Johann Mueller, Czech policeman, killed Friday in a quarrel with German officers.

Czech leaders estimated more than 20,000 persons had gathered at Nachod, where Mueller was slain, to take part in the ceremony.

The protectorate government tonight forbade all strikes and lockouts "in order to maintain peace, work, and to maintain the economic life of the community." The government said it would announce soon a decree regulating salaries.

Japan Blockades British, French

the United States, with business interests in China.

The United States, without a concession of its own in Tientsin, has extensive business interests in both the British and French concessions.

A Japanese military statement said the Tientsin blockade had been ordered because "the last limit of our patience has been reached." It said the blockade would be continued until the British handed over the four wanted Chinese terrorists.

The statement demanded that the British discontinue:

Protecting anti-Japanese and Communist elements.

Supporting Chinese currency and hampering the circulation of Japanese-sponsored "federal reserve" notes.

Causing a rise in commodity prices by hoarding.

Conniving in the operation of unregistered wireless stations.

Allowing anti-Japanese textbooks in schools in the British concession.

The statement expressed regret that the measures will inconvenience French and other nationals but explained that they are necessary because of the futility of further negotiations with British authorities who "protect murderers."

U. S. Affected

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull and other State Department officials were paying close attention yesterday to Japanese preparations to blockade the British and French concessions at Tientsin, north China, where a number of American business interests are located.

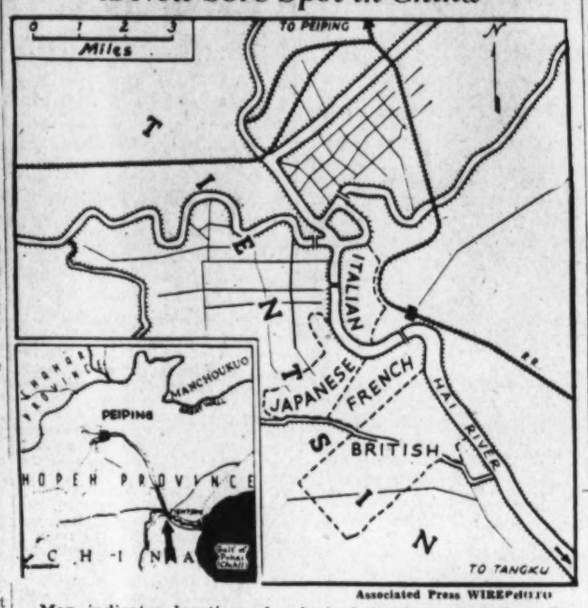

Notification of the blockade was handed to American consular authorities, with the implication that American business interests would be expected to observe it. The blockade is the latest step in a series of incidents between Japan and Great Britain.

Two hundred and fifty American Marines are stationed at Tientsin. There is no American concession in Tientsin, but American business houses are located in both the British and the French concessions, and are estimated to have a business turnover of about $26,000,000 annually.

The American firms include two banks, two dye houses, two woolen mills and some real estate companies. Four hundred Americans live in Tientsin proper and 1,200 in the Tientsin American consular district.

Tientsin's foreign trade in 1938 amounted to 106,321,000 Chinese dollars (now about $14,000,000).

Accused of Making Torture Cells, He Faces Strangling

Barcelona, June 13 (AP).—Alfonso Laurent Cik, a Yugoslav architect, 12 times sentenced to death by Spanish Republicans, faced possible execution by strangulation by Nationalists who charged he built and decorated weird cells in which prisoners were tortured to blindness and insanity.

The prosecutor declared it had been conclusively proved Cik directed the construction of little odd-shaped concrete cells 4 feet high and "decorated" them with diagonal yellow lines, red-white-blue-yellow spots and black and white cubes in such a way that the figures changed shape before the stares of prisoners dazed by high-powered rays from multicolored lamps.

"Never in all the history of Spain has there ever been such refined devices of the most horrible tortures," declared Col. Jose. The chief of the Nationalist secret service estimated that at least 2,000 had been held in such cells in a few months before Barcelona was captured.

Colonies Nazi Price Of Peace Parley

Berlin, June 13 (AP).—The return of Germany's war-lost colonies was said by an authorized foreign office source tonight to be the "prime condition" for Nazi participation in any conference to bring Europe back to normalcy.

"Before we could even consider taking part in a conference as suggested by the English," this source said, "the colonies stolen from us must be returned."

Riots Not Due To Her Regime, Says Dr. Smith

Holds Street Caused Her Dismissal for Conditions He Tolerated

Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith yesterday took the stand in her own defense and charged the Board of Public Welfare in general, and its chairman in particular, with "prejudice and self-interest" in dismissing her as superintendent of the National Training School for Girls in 1937.

In essence, Dr. Smith's answer to three weeks' charges of maladministration before the Commissioners was that during her tenure of office "nothing extraordinary" transpired and that the conditions which were alleged as responsible for her discharge existed, even in increased degree, under her predecessors.

Refers to Record

Only prejudices could have been the real reason for her removal, she said, since conduct records indicated "there have been riots before, the police have been called numerous times . . . there has always been profanity, impudence, disobedience and homosexual practices. That there has been waste and extravagance I need only refer you to the House sub-committee hearing appropriations in 1933."

She said her efforts to obtain cooperation from the welfare board and Elwood Street, former welfare director, had resulted in agreement "on paper" but not in actuality.

"The body responsible for my abrupt dismissal without a hearing were impelled by prejudice, self-interest and the influence of a minority of the members of the Board of Public Welfare," Dr. Smith charged.

"The prejudice of the chairman of the Board of Public Welfare was aroused by the public exposure by a Senate sub-committee of the 'barbarious conditions' which he had tolerated prior to my administration . . .

Defends Cottages

"The chairman of the board was further prejudiced by his racial intolerance which was outraged by a simple informal gathering of white and colored social workers at the school."

Dr. Smith defended her building of small cottages for the inmates, for which she had been criticized, by noting that the smaller unit had been approved three times by the board. She said that the profanity found in the girls' conduct records might be duplicated "at the uncensored local vaudeville houses."

Hearings will be resumed at 10 a. m. today.

18 Men, 4 Women Charged on Dope Count; 150 Seized

Eighteen men and four women, all colored, were charged with violations of narcotics laws yesterday following the arrests of 150 persons in more than 40 raids by local and Federal authorities Monday night and early yesterday.

The suspects were accused as peddlers of dope supplied them by a New York City gang of six men, who were taken into custody before the local drive began.

More than 35 District homes were entered by approximately 60 Federal agents, members of the local pickup squad and Detective Sergt. Robert Bryant and Richard McCarty, of the narcotic squad.

M. L. Harney, assistant to the commissioner of narcotics, said that more than $6,000 worth of heroin has been transported into Washington each week for many months.

Minton Predicts McNutt Would Back 3d Term

Paul V. McNutt, American high commissioner to the Philippines, will abandon his campaign for the 1940 Democratic Presidential nomination and support President Roosevelt if the Chief Executive seeks a third term, Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, predicted yesterday.

Until the President indicates his course, the McNutt organization will continue to seek convention votes, Minton said.

Senators Back Extension of Money Powers

Committee Favorably Reports Bill Continuing President's Authority

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday reported favorably the bill to extend the President's emergency monetary powers.

With Senator Glass, veteran Virginia Democrat, as their leader, conservative Senate Democrats and Republicans immediately prepared for a showdown fight on extension of the power to devalue the dollar.

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, Democratic leader, revealed that the bill to extend this power, as well as the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and the authority to pay a premium for newly mined domestic silver, probably would be called up in the Senate Monday.

Leaders were confident that the bill would be passed without change. The vote on an amendment to strike out the dollar devaluation power, however, is expected to be close.

The Banking Committee report says the President has no intention of using the power to cut the gold content of the dollar down to 50 per cent, as he would be authorized to do, but would use the power if foreign governments manipulated their currencies against United States interests. The monetary powers in the bill, which have been in effect for several years, expire June 30.

the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

It has been reported that, if the House should approve the bill, leaders would confer with the President on Senate strategy, to choose between two alternatives:

Either to hold Congress indefinitely in session until the back of the threatened filibuster is broken, or to adjourn on condition the Senate would be recalled for neutrality action if the foreign situation takes a serious turn. But at his press conference late yesterday, the President said he planned no further conferences with leaders on the neutrality issue.

Japanese Embargo Killed

Before reporting the bill yesterday, the House committee rejected an amendment by Representative Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey, restricting shipment of materials to Japan to be used in its war against China. Eaton served notice he will introduce the amendment as a separate bill.

On motion of Tinkham, the committee restored a present law provision banning large guns on American merchant vessels doing business with belligerents.

All present law provisions for application of the law to civil strife, or to any Western Hemisphere powers, were stricken.

Bar Rules Gifts To Court Aides 'Improper'

Advocates $1,000 Fines For Any Attempts to Influence Witnesses

Proposed changes in rulings to permit the investment of trust funds in federally insured building and loan associations were supported last night by a narrow margin by the District of Columbia Bar Association at its monthly meeting in Mayflower Hotel.

A report read by former President Walter Bastian recommending that no change be made in the rules of the Federal District Court of the District of Columbia, so as to permit such investments, was disapproved on a standing vote.

The association also voted that all gifts, loans and gratuities to court officials or employes were "improper," and advocated a bill to punish all attempts at influencing or intimidating witnesses by $1,000 fine or a year's imprisonment.

A resolution introduced by Henry I. Quinn to put the register of deeds under the Commissioners of the District and place his office in the new Municipal Building was rejected after prolonged debate, the association accepting the report of its committee that the office should be housed in a separate building, close to the courthouse.

The committee on the Mental Health Commission reported that Representative Vreeland (Republican), of New Jersey, had agreed to withdraw his bill abolishing the commission, and the association voted to appoint a committee to study amendments to the present law.

Treatment of patients suffering from curable mental diseases at St. Elizabeths Hospital without being officially adjudged insane was advocated in a resolution adopted at the close of the meeting. The committee on the Vreeland bill was instructed by the resolution to seek the inclusion of an amendment to this effect in any new legislation.

Clerks Laid Off After Riot In Auto Strike

Wisconsin Governor Refuses Troops Despite 2 Requests by Sheriff

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, June 13.—The main force of office workers at the strike-bound Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. plant has been ordered to remain at home tomorrow to avoid repetition of rioting that has injured 13 persons, Max W. Babb, company president, announced tonight.

His announcement followed shortly after Sheriff Mitten's second plea within 18 hours for troops to guard the largest industrial works in the Milwaukee area.

Gov. Julius Heil denied both the sheriff's pleas and threatened, observers at a meeting of law enforcement officers said, to remove Mitten from office if he could not maintain order.

Babb said only a "skeleton crew" would be on duty to answer mail and take care of other incidentals in the office normally manned by about 1,000 persons. He said orders for a reduced staff applied only for tomorrow.

The disorders developed when office workers—the only ones of 7,500 workers still on duty—arrived in neighborhood of the factory in suburban West Allis this morning.

Pickets attacked streetcars carrying them, smashed windows, disabled the cars, jostled workers and beat deputy sheriffs who intervened.

House Limits TVA Territory

General Accounting Office.

David Lilienthal, TVA director and target of several Republican attacks during debate on the proposal, had expressed vigorous objections to the amendments.

The House amendment now goes back to the Senate, which can ask for a conference.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, said he was "stunned" by the House action and agreed with Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, that the bond legislation "will die in the conference committee."

At one point in today's debate, Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, declared that Henry L. Doherty, utilities magnate, "has slept in one of the twin beds in the White House" since the advent of the New Deal.

Representative Bradley (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, had interrupted a speech by Representative Short (Democrat), of Missouri, to say that President Hoover permitted Doherty to "defraud the American public and did nothing about it" and asked that Short "also tell about the write-ups in the valuation of the utilities."

Schafer interjected that the record of the Pecora stock market investigation showed that "the rottenest job of robbing the American people, so far as fake securities were concerned, was in the case of the Cities Service Co. (headed by Doherty) and that the American people were robbed of more than $1,400,000,000."

New York, June 13 (AP).—A move by the House Military Affairs Committee to limit the geographical operations of the Tennessee Valley Authority in the purchase of power distribution facilities may open the way for $300,000,000 in refinancing by Southern subsidiaries of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, it was said today in utility circles.

Temporary Haven Given Refugees In 4 Countries

Paris, June 13 (AP).—At least temporary havens for the 907 refugee German Jews who have been wandering the seas aboard the liner St. Louis, were assured tonight by the governments of France, England, Belgium and the Netherlands.

The four western European countries each agreed to take about one-fourth of the shipload of refugees after the American joint distribution committee had volunteered a bond of $500 for each passenger of the liner.

The St. Louis, which left Hamburg May 15, and turned back to Europe after the Jews were denied permission to land in Cuba and the Dominican Republic, is expected to reach a European port Saturday.

structure can begin. The strikes are also holding up start of construction of the Social Security and Railroad Retirement twin buildings.

Carpenters' Demands

Carpenters seek an increase from $1.50 to $1.62½ an hour. Building laborers are asking 80 cents an hour for unskilled help and 95 cents for semiskilled, as against the present flat 70-cent scale.

A 5-cent-an-hour increase in wages and new night working scheduled settled the bakers' controversy. Bakers working any eight hours between 5 p. m. and 7 a. m. will be on the night scale of $1.25 an hour under the agreement. They waived a demand for two weeks' vacation with pay in place of the present one week.

Expectant Fathers Shun Instruction

St. Louis, June 13 (AP).—Expectant fathers apparently are a wee bit timid.

Only two fathers-to-be turned up today at a St. Louis County clinic where they were to be instructed in various phases of baby care. Invitations had been sent to husbands of 13 women receiving pre-natal guidance at the county's maternal clinic.

English Canada Turns Out for George, Queen

Sovereigns Travel Through Forests, Along Ragged Coast

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Aboard Royal Train in New Brunswick, June 13. — Britannia's sailor King, George VI, the only member of the royal family who took part in the naval battle of Jutland, began a three-day visit today among the people of Canada's maritime provinces, the descendants of the seafaring English, Scots and Irish.

In perfect weather, under sunny skies with the temperature in the lower seventies, King George and Queen Elizabeth traveled several hundred miles by train and motor through the Province of New Brunswick, its population of 400,000 swollen by visitors from New England.

At St. John, principal seaport and commercial capital of this lumbering, farming and seafaring province, every boat in the Bay of Fundy Harbor, with its famous 50-foot tides, was gay with flags and bunting. The fisherfolk were nearly all on land to cheer their sovereigns through 9 miles of streets.

Out of French Canada

The royal train moved out of French Canada during the night and into the seaside regions where English is the mother tongue of nearly everyone—a region of forests and rugged shores and of small farms.

The royal day began with a ten-minute stop at 10:20 a. m., Atlantic daylight-saving time (8:20 Eastern standard time), at Newcastle. Wher the mayor and his wife and the members of the town council and their wives had been presented to their sovereigns on the station platform, the royal party got into automobiles for a 108-mile drive through the lumber country of Fredericton the provincial capital.

Most of the road was paved. The part that was merely graveled had been treated overnight to lay the dust. Scheduled to require more than three hours, the drive through the forests took nearly four, for the King and Queen made two unscheduled stops. In Millerton they had their car halted and the Queen accepted an unbooked bouquet. At Doaktown they stopped again, accepted a second bouquet that was not on the protocol, and strolled into a tearoom.

At Fredericton the ceremonies were the same as those in the other six provincial capitals the royal tour has already visited. The two provincial capitals still ahead will follow the identical formula—21-gun salute, visit to Legislative Building, presentation of bigwig politicos and their spouses, and a drive through aisles of cheering subjects.

For today's ceremonies King George wore a cutaway; his Queen—for the fourth time since they landed in Canada four weeks ago tomorrow—was garbed in a pale blue ensemble with halo hat to match. During the automobile trip between Newcastle and Fredericton one of the cars following the royal pair in the procession swerved into a ditch to avoid a child. No one was hurt.

Royal Train Sidetracked

Following the receptions at Fredericton the royal party proceeded to Beaverbrook Hall at the University of New Brunswick for luncheon as the guests of the lieutenant governor of the province. Half an hour behind schedule they then boarded a train for St. John, where the royal train awaited. The royal train was considered to be too heavy to risk running over the bridges and culverts and lightly ballasted roadbed on that particular stretch of the 10,000-mile tour.

In St. John, at Barrack Green overlooking the harbor, thousands of school children had assembled, and Lieut. Gov. Maclaren presented his namesake, Mayor D. L. Maclaren, to the English King and his Scottish Queen.

Leaving St. John at 7:30 p. m. of this cool, sparkling clear evening, the royal train reached Moncton at 10 o'clock, local time, for a 10-minute stop.

After passing most of the night on a sidetrack, the train was scheduled to deposit its royal passengers at 10 a. m. tomorrow at Cape Tormentine, whence George and Elizabeth are to go by destroyer to Charlottetown, capital of the smallest of their Canadian provinces, Prince Edward Island. After the provincial reception there tomorrow they will return to the mainland in the afternoon, landing at Pictou, going on to New Glasgow, and then proceeding overnight to Halifax. From that port they will sail for home Thursday evening, stopping for a few hours on Saturday at St. Johns, the capital of the oldest of British colonies, Newfoundland.

Police Work Here Best of His Trip, King Is Quoted

Capital police received word yesterday of special commendation by King George VI for their work during Their Britannic Majesties' visit. In a memorandum to the entire force, Chief Ernest W. Brown said:

"On Friday night, June 9, 1939, the President requested the Major and Superintendent to meet him at Union Station, where the President personally conveyed to me his deep appreciation and commendation of the very outstanding services rendered by the Metropolitan Police Department, stating that His Majesty the King had requested the President to convey to me and the members of the force his commendation and appreciation for the most outstanding police services it nad been his privilege to witness during his visit to Canada and the United States."

The commendation will be officially recorded beside the name of each policeman on duty for the royal visit.

comfortable quarters would do very well for their daughters.

Plans for the moment are nebulous, but Their Majesties are so delighted with the beauty of their great dominion that they want their children to see the New World.

Their Majesties are eager to prepare their eldest daughter to be a good and wise Queen. Their Canadian voyage has impressed upon them the importance that she see some of the British Empire which she will one day rule.

The Duke of Windsor, when Prince of Wales, is the last heir to visit Canada. Canadians still adore him.

It seems likely that the populace which has gone wild over the royal tour of their King and Queen, would do likewise if Princess Elizabeth were to visit here.

A Reminder to the Youth of America on Flag Day!

A Page from American History

In the Revolutionary War, Colonel Isaac Franks of Philadelphia was aide-de-camp to General Washington. Haym Solomon gave his entire fortune to save the American Cause. He died penniless. Hundreds of Jews served in the Revolutionary Army.

In the War of 1812, Uriah P. Levy, commander of the Brig-of-War "Argus," ran the British blockade and destroyed 21 British merchantmen. He died a Commodore, the Navy's highest rank.

In the War with Mexico, General David de Leon of South Carolina was twice honored by Congress for valor and ability. Moses Albert Levy served as Surgeon-General.

In the Civil War, 10,000 Jews served North or South with distinction and honor. In the Confederacy, Judah P. Benjaman was Secretary of War; L. M. Harby, Commodore of the Navy.

In the North, Frederick Knefler of Indiana rose to the rank of Major General. Edward S. Solomon survived every important engagement to become a Brigadier General.

Lincoln handed Leopold Newman of New York his commission as Brigadier General while he lay dying of wounds received at Chancellorsville

In the Spanish-American War, 5,000 Jewish volunteers answered the call of their country.

In the World War, 250,000 fought. Forming 3½ percent of the population, Jews contributed nearly 5% of the fighting forces. Approximately 10,000 Jews held commissioned rank. Over 1,100 Jews were cited for valor in action. 4 Congressional Medals of Honor were awarded to Jews; 200 won the Distinguished Service Cross. Of 14,000 Jewish casualties, 3,400 made the Supreme Sacrifice.

The JEWISH WAR VETERANS, proud of their contribution to America in peace and war, will always serve the country they love!

A flag is a symbol. It may stand for something good. Or it may mean something wicked and destructive to all mankind.

Old Glory waves over a land that represents "Liberty and Justice for all" . . . in vivid contrast to other lands blighted by Barbarism and Godlessness.

Americans have more reason today than ever to be proud of America —to uphold it in peace, to defend and fight for its ideals.

To the youth of America we say:

Fight for your country in PEACE by driving its enemies from you. Cherish the freedom you now enjoy. It's your birthright as an American.

A traitor has no place in our midst. Especially when he comes to undermine our country.

Shun the scoundrel who would destroy our national unity by preaching group hatred.

He may call himself Communist, Fascist or Nazi. Recognize him for what he is . . . an avowed enemy of America. America does not want him.

America wants no blood purges, no murder cults, no wholesale destruction of all religion. Swastika or Hammer and Sickle . . . both alike are a blight and a menace.

Stick to Old Glory!

squad, the child was found to have suffered a possible fractured skull.

A bolt of lightning ripped through the roof of the Dunbarton College chapel, at Twenty-ninth and Upton streets northwest. It cut a 4-foot hole in the roof and struck directly over the altar.

Meanwhile, storm warnings were ordered in the Gulf of Mexico and along Florida coats areas after the Weather Bureau revealed that a tropical storm was moving north-northeasterly. Squalls and gales are expected to reach the Florida coast today.

At the height of the storm, supper-bound motorists were stalled on Washington streets, on Highway Bridge, on roads leading into nearby Virginia and Maryland. Motorists who kept moving drove through the downpour with lights on. In outlying sections dirt banks washed onto the roads, and in Arlington County an emergency call went out to county road workers.

The Weather Bureau reported that as the storm broke over Washington, the wind velocity gauges showed several strong gusts, the highest reaching 38 miles an hour, or moderate gale velocity.

The temperature, which rose to a maximum of 84 at 3 p. m. yesterday, dropped two degrees by 5:30 when the thunderstorm hit, then tumbled to 69 degrees at 6:30 p. m.

The Weather Bureau said that showers would continue through the night, and early today, to be followed by cloudy weather this afternoon and fair skies tomorrow. The mercury was due to rise again today.

While Washington drivers halted their cars to let the first rush of the storm pass, airport officials held incoming planes away from the Washington airport for as much as an hour. Officials described this as a routine measure, followed when visibility drops.

Beyond the delay for several flights, none of the planes had trouble getting through to the field.

Bicyclists in Potomac Park and along Hains Point were forced to seek shelter.

The District's sewer department reported that residents throughout the city asked help when sewers backed up into their cellars. The overworked street drain system left many intersections swollen into fords.

At a 3-foot depression in the road at Twenty-first and Oklahoma avenue northeast, more than a dozen cars were stalled. Four men, William Blandford, 23, of Clinton, Md.; Elmer Williams, 23, of 520 Mellon street northeast; Ospar Lonesome, colored, of 2014 E street northeast, and William Moore, colored, of 2016 E street northeast, did volunteer rescue work for more than an hour and helped push the cars to dry ground.

Several small cave-ins were reported along Indiana avenue between Third and Fifth streets northwest. Where the streets had been dug up for repairs, several automobiles were stuck in mud to their hubs. Excavations for new buildings in the new Municipal Center project were flooded six inches or more.

Rock Creek Park roads had to be closed to traffic, and 18 inches of water inundated the area around the boathouse at the Tidal Basin.

In Silver Spring, Md., rail filled the road under the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad viaduct and traffic had to be detoured for more than an hour by county police before the road was passable. The roadbed was washed out at the intersection of Houston and Montgomery avenues, and in Alton Parkway, near Noyes drive.

Electric current was broken for more than a half hour in Herndon, Fairfax County, Va., where a municipal election was being held. Officials rushed to the firehouse for lanterns so that balloting could continue although all town lights were out.

Because of the lightning threat to their radio systems, all District police scout cars cruisers were ordered back to their stations to await emergency storm rescue orders.

Extension of the investigation period under the adoption act from 60 to 90 days.

Authority for the Philadelphia, Baltimore & Washington Railroad to extend its tracks to Buzzards Point.

Permission to install underground conduits for electric lines.

Other Senate bills passed and sent to the House propose that the annual registration date for motor vehicles be moved up to April 1 and that hospitals be enabled to obtain liens on damage settlements for bills owed them by injured persons.

A bill reported by the Senate Military Affairs Committee would authorize the Army chief of engineers to enter into agreements for the use of District water for fire-fighting purposes in suburban Maryland towns.

Loophole Study On New Tax Bill are studying the efficiency of existing safeguards against evasion of tax payments.

Under scrutiny by Attorney General Murphy and Edward H. Foley, jr., general counsel of the Treasury, he said, is section 102 of the revenue law, designed to prevent undue accumulation of corporate earnings.

Question of Prosecution

The President said it was a question of whether or not this could prevent wholesale tax avoidance under the proposed flat corporate rate, or whether provisions should be strengthened to guard against undue accumulation of surplus. He said the question was largely one of legal prosecution.

Treasury officials, meanwhile, said the undivided profits tax was largely regarded as a preventive, whereas under the flat corporate rate it would be a question of prosecution after the fact. The decision as to whether there was undue accumulation of earnings would be left with the commissioner of internal revenue.

The President repeatedly has stipulated that no tax loopholes should be opened by the revision now in progress and that revenue yields be equal to those under present law.

Additional Changes

The House sub-committee yesterday approved three additional changes in the law. One would permit corporations in unsound financial condition to fedeem their own bonds at less than face value without being subject to income tax on the difference between par value and the price paid.

This privilege would expire December 31, 1942, and apply only to bonds issued before June 1, 1939.

A second change would amend laws governing tax liens so a lien on negotiable securities could not be passed along to the innocent purchaser of those securities. Liability would hold against the seller, not the purchaser.

A third change supplied a formula that would allow American corporations more liberal tax credits on taxes paid abroad on foreign income.

Previously the subcommittee had approved the more sweeping revisions favored by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, capped by repeal of the undivided profits tax, substitution of an 18 per cent income tax on corporations earning more than $25,000, and continuing the present graduated 12½ to 16 per cent tax on companies earning less than $25,000.

Janitor Pleads Drunkenness in Murder Trial

William (Major) McAfee, 63-year-old colored janitor, pleaded drunkenness in vain yesterday in an effort to keep a District Court jury from hearing his confession that he beat Mrs. Henrietta Barbara Anderson to death with a furnace shaker August 22, 1937.

After hearing several detectives testify to the circumstances of the confession, Justice Proctor ordered the jury called back into court and permitted it to hear the confession.

The confession—the only evidence of premeditation—enables the Government to renew its demand that McAfee die in the electric chair. The Court of Appeals reversed his first death sentence, holding that the first trial jury was not strongly instructed to disregard the confession if McAfee did not make it of his own will.

approval. He said he considers the income tax the least objectionable form of taxation and far preferable to any form of sales tax.

A possible snag in the legislative progress of the revenue bill was foreseen if the Senate should eliminate the Cochran amendment exempting members of Congress and all legislative employes from the income levy.

Chairman King said he is opposed to the exemption, but other District Committee members stated off the record that they thought it all right. House members who handled the measure expressed the belief that the House would never accept the bill if the income tax were made to apply to the salaries of Congressmen.

The Rule Of Law

When Norman Thomas spoke in Jersey City on Monday night, his official reception was in striking contrast with that of 14 months ago.

Then the Socialist leader was given short shrift. Attempting to make a speech in Journal Square, he was pelted with rotten eggs and unceremoniously hustled out of town by Jersey City police. There was then no place for free speech in Mayor Hague's bailiwick. "I am the law," the mayor was reported to have said, and apparently that was precisely what he meant.

This time Mr. Thomas was not only permitted to speak but was protected in his right to do so. The attitude of the local burghers was apparently not much more friendly than heretofore. But on Monday uniformed policemen were on hand to defend Mr. Thomas against the proletariat. And when he left the city it was on his own initiative.

The change in the attitude of the Jersey City authorities on the subject of free speech is as striking as it is commendable. And it is useful to reflect on the cause of the alteration.

No force was necessary to compel Mayor Hague to permit what previously he had refused to countenance. There was no physical intervention by any outside authority in the affairs of the New Jersey municipality. All that happened was the publication of a Supreme Court opinion. In examining an appealed case the Court reached the conclusion that previous action by the Jersey City authorities had been unconstitutional. The opinion was not unanimous and not easy reading for the laity. But its force was immediate and overwhelming.

Behind every law, whether in a dictatorship or a democracy, there is the ultimate sanction of force. But in a democracy force is rarely necessary to compel observance of law. The real sanction is the readiness of the people voluntarily to submit to the law's dictates. In modifying his course after the Supreme Court had spoken, Mayor Hague showed that he is mindful of this fundamental fact and fully prepared to live up to it. That is occasion for rejoicing.

Force To Meet Force

The extent to which British public opinion has hardened against the Third Reich is shown by the opposition criticism of recent speeches made by Premier Chamberlain and Foreign Minister Halifax, which were interpreted as extending an olive branch to Hitler.

Mr. Chamberlain has recently declared that Great Britain is willing to discuss the colonial question with Germany. And Lord Halifax last week said that the British government is "anxious to explore the whole problem of Lebensraum (living room) not only for Germany but for all European nations." At the same time, however, both British statesmen made it very clear that such negotiations will not be possible unless Germany manifests a convincing willingness to abandon the path of aggression. "The day has gone by," said Lord Halifax, "when the independence of nations may be destroyed by unilateral action. It is clear that any further attempt to do so will meet with wide and resolute resistance."

If this is appeasement, the term has obviously undergone very considerable modification since Munich. But the fact that the London government finds it desirable to continue qualified overtures toward Germany is indication that Messrs. Chamberlain and Halifax are most anxious not to have present British foreign policy misunderstood in the Third Reich.

In particular, they are concerned to do nothing and say nothing that will give Hitler any legitimate justification for continuing to complain of an encircled Germany. That slogan is proving immensely valuable to the Nazi regime in maintaining a will for war among the German people.

Speaking in Parliament on Monday, Lord Halifax clarified the British government's position by declaring that "if force is used today, those who use it must count upon force being met by force." But, he went on, "if there is no attempt or intention to resort to force, then the whole influence of this country—which is not negligible—will be thrown on the side of reaching a fair settlement by negotiation."

These words closely paralleled President Roosevelt's remarks, on the same day, to the graduating class at West Point. Desire for peace, said the President, "must never be mistaken for weakness." The fact that the British are constructively eager to prevent tensions from rising in Europe does not necessarily mean that they have any desire, at this time, to slacken in their efforts to create a truly functioning antiaggression bloc.

This duality of aim is subject to misunderstanding. But Messrs. Chamberlain and Halifax are evidently prepared to take the risk of being misunderstood if they can serve the cause of enduring peace thereby.

Not Without Merit

Two dominating motives stand out in the debate which led to passage of the District tax bill by the House. Members were emphatically opposed to taxing their own salaries for the benefit of Washington. When the bill was amended so as to preclude any possibility that it might apply to Congressmen and their secretaries, there was overwhelming sentiment in favor of a stiff tax for residents of the District.

These two motives largely account for the crudities of the bill. No effort was made to work out a reasonable schedule of rates and exemptions after the House had decided to substitute an income tax for the business-privilege levy. There seemed little interest in making the bill workable, once its burdens had been diverted from the shoulders of the legislators.

There is good reason for Washingtonians to resent this attitude. But it does not follow that the bill should be thoughtlessly condemned. It is based on principles for which conscientious groups of citizens have been working for years. The bill has merit in spite of its revelation that a majority of Congressmen wish to evade any financial responsibility to the community in which they spend more than half their time.

Of course, the income tax section should not be approved as it now stands. Its rate schedule was written for incomes over $10,000. By dropping the exemption to $2,000, the House would levy really exorbitant taxes. As the measure stands, it grossly violates the principle of ability to pay and thus undermines the strongest argument in favor of income taxation. Application of the tax to 1938 income also seems inexcusable.

These defects, however, can be readily corrected. Representative Bates, whose amendment cut the exemption on earned income from $10,000 to $2,000, will appeal to the Senate District Committee to work out a "reasonable" rate schedule. That committee will also have to consider proper exemptions for dependents. Its task will be to write a general income tax measure in place of the highly distorted levy approved by the House.

In bringing about this transformation the Senate committee will face a number of important issues. Any income tax adopted for the District of Columbia is likely to be regarded as a model in State capitals. And since the Federal Government obtains a large part of its revenue from income taxation, more general reliance of States and local communities upon revenue from this source may have a far-reaching effect upon Federal finances. It is not to be supposed that the committee will be able to bring about a co-ordination of Federal and local revenue systems in dealing with this bill. But that important ultimate objective should not be lost to sight.

The need for co-ordination of Federal and local taxes suggests at once that the exemptions in the District bill should be comparatively low and the rates moderate. Federal claims upon large incomes are already beyond the point of diminishing returns. To obtain more revenue through direct income taxes, for either Federal or local purposes, greater reliance upon moderate incomes is essential.

The probable yield of the bill is likewise important. Action was taken in the House without any estimate, reliable or otherwise, as to how much money the revised measure would raise. Substantial sums will be needed to offset losses from repeal of the inequitable taxes on gross business receipts and on intangible personal property. But care should be taken to prevent imposition of drastic rates that would result in piling up a surplus. The most satisfactory arrangement would be a sliding scale which could be adjusted by the District Commissioners in accord with changing revenue needs.

In all fairness, the Senate should eliminate the provision limiting the Federal contribution to the District to $5,000,000. The Overton bill calling for a Federal payment in keeping with the Government's tax-exempt land holdings should well be substituted for that arbitrary restriction. At a time when it is imposing heavy taxes on local residents, Congress should be doubly careful not to ignore its own responsibility to the Nation's Capital.

With careful adjustment, the tax bill can be modified into a constructive reform measure. It is to that task which local citizens should direct their efforts. Whatever measure is finally adopted is likely to intensify our tax consciousness, for income taxes are never hidden or painless. But that is entirely in their favor. The payment of direct taxes will greatly stimulate the interest of Washingtonians in local government. And that, in turn, will bring improvement in local government.

So the House tax bill seems more of a challenge than an offense. Despite its obvious faults, it opens the way to adoption of a scientific revenue system for Washington. And if it accentuates the civic consciousness of a rather apathetic community, it may well prove a blessing in disguise.

Conflicting Systems

In his statement celebrating the fifth anniversary of the trade agreements act, Secretary Hull took justifiable pride in the progress achieved under that measure.

No one has fought with greater vigor and pertinacity to remove barriers in the way of world trade. And to the Secretary of State must go no small part of the credit for the fact that, during these five years, no fewer than 20 nations, covering nearly 60 per cent of our foreign trade, have entered into reciprocal trade agreements with the United States.

It is significant, however, that Secretary Hull's statement was not confined to rejoicing over a task well done. Much of it, in fact, was devoted to an attack on the system of economic self-containment which is in direct and mortal conflict with the Hull program.

Autarchy is a disease which feeds on itself. The creation of a militarist mentality, it accentuates rearmament as the key to economic salvation. But its pernicious effects are not confined to those who live under totalitarian rule. Through the barter system, other nations become enslaved. As Mr. Hull says: "Small nations which enter into such arrangements with a large nation become increasingly dependent upon the large nation for economic existence and inevitably become vassals of the large nation."

Thus it is that the struggle in the political sphere between those nations which believe in orderly adjustment and development and those which regard force as the only arbiter is intertwined with the struggle between free and closed systems of international economy.

This circumstance Mr. Hull realized years ago. He has always regarded the reciprocal trade program not merely as a useful medium of international economic rehabilitation but also as a constructive step toward world peace. For, as he points out, "there will never be assured peace, confidence and progress until the peoples of all the leading nations fully realize that economic barriers lie at the root of the world's major ills."

Hard To Digest

Since the occupation of Bohemia and Moravia by German troops last March there have been a number of encounters between agents of the Third Reich and inhabitants of the conquered provinces. Some of these scuffles have led to bloodshed. Yet, until now, the Nazi leaders have refrained from making an issue of the incidents.

It is significant, therefore, that the killing of a German policeman in the town of Kladno, near Prague, last week has been played up by the German press as an event of major importance. Actually it is by no means clear that this murder had a political motivation. But the Nazi authorities are assuming that it did and are threatening to take strong action to prevent recurrences.

There are other indications that the Third Reich is finding Czecho-Slovakia a difficult meal to digest. While there has been little physical opposition to the German conquerors, much passive resistance is reported. In many ways the people of Bohemia and Moravia have manifested their dislike of German rule and have made the exploitation of those rich provinces difficult. Such passive resistance is not easy to combat.

To put down opposition the German authorities now threaten to govern Bohemia and Moravia by martial law. But it is doubtful whether rule by the bayonet would make the Czechs love their new masters any more. It would, if history is any guide, only tend to harden the determination of the people of what was once Czecho-Slovakia to undermine the German conquest in every possible way.

The total destruction of the republic of Masaryk and Benes may yet prove the most serious mistake made by Hitler. As was cynically said of Napoleon's execution of the Duc d'Enghien, it was more than a crime; it was a blunder.

There is much to be said for the logic of a neighbor's 4-year-old daughter who had a misunderstanding with a goat, and who on being asked if the goat butted her, replied, "No, he didn't butt me; he headed me."

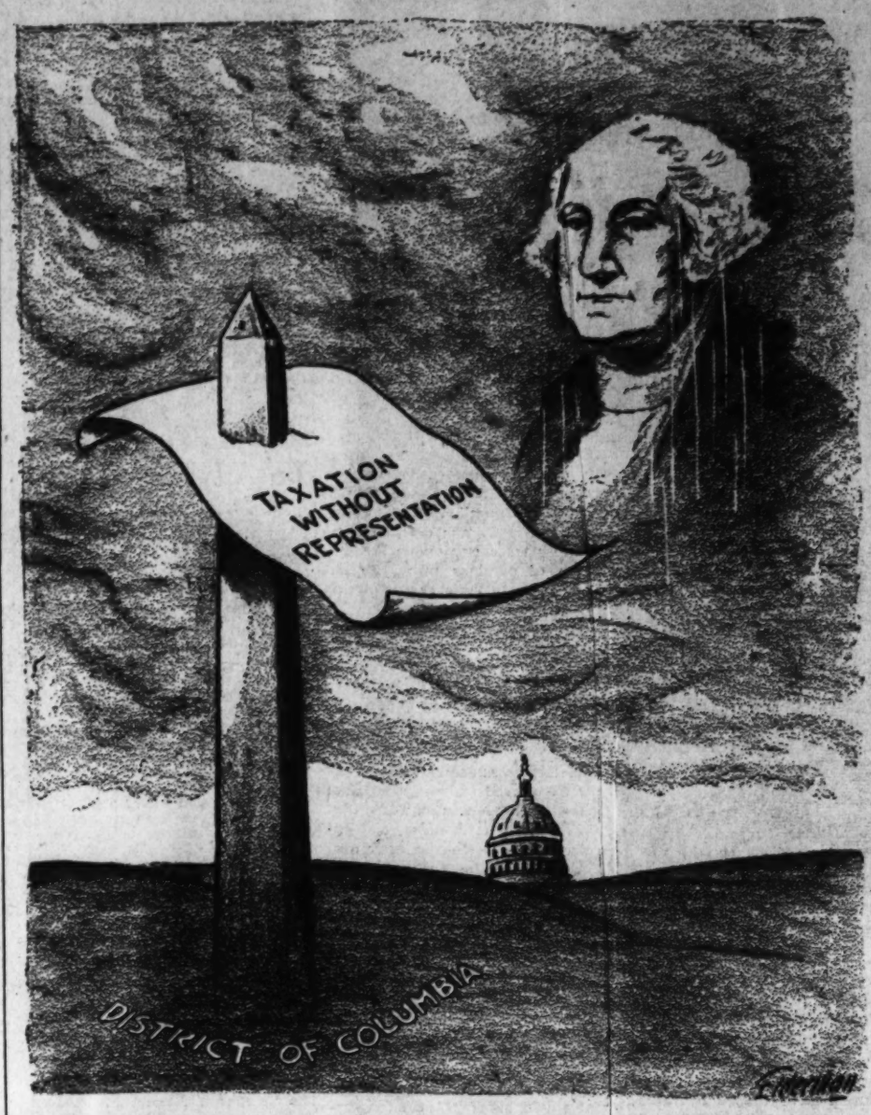

"And then after that they used to be so forgetful counting motherpeributts (up one up four) to membore her beaufu modern maiden name by the dream."—From James Joyce's Finnegans Wake. All right, Gertrude, it's yours now.

"Why not give the country back to the Indians?" asks a conservative Democrat. No can do. Indian heap much too smart. If Democrats no want country any more, givum back to Republicans.

"Babies born abroad of American parents are American citizens." Of course. They needn't think they can slide out from under their pro rata share of the national debt.

Private Financing

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The stimulation of industry through employment of private capital and consequent reduction of unemployment, deficits and future taxes, appears to await the organization of private enterprise directed to the solution of that particular problem.

Expanding governmental control over industrial and economic affairs appears to be inevitable so long as private enterprise fails to assume the initiative and leadership in meeting the problem of wide unemployment and depression.

Private enterprise and the local control thereof is likely to be preserved by action or lost by inaction. A more operative form of association by district, region and Nation appears requisite for promoting and financing private enterprise with private capital.

A century old, the organization of Lloyd's, London, suggests a pattern for a system of associations of financing houses dedicated to the purpose of underwriting development enterprises. Commerce and trade groups co-operating through sponsoring development enterprises in their own areas and supplementing that sponsorship by support through the period of financing and stock distribution, and beyond, into the period of operation.

Projects requiring capital beyond the capacity of the district association seeking the facilities of the regional and beyond that a national association. As a last resort, Government finances might be sought for participation basis relief and military needs.

Given the opportunity of participation in underwriting and financing community and Nation building enterprise, it is reasonable to assume that American capital will assume the obligation as America always has. But the Nation will not drift to a solution of its problems. The failure of private enterprise to attack and solve its own problems will invite legislative surgery.

Carpenters' Wages

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Carpenters agree to compromise for $13 for an 8-hour day—runs today's headline. This marks a retreat from $13 for 7 hours, which should make hearty cheers emanate from the ranks of the politically created jobless. This compares with $8 a day in effect before the New Deal.

Such wages will affect rentals of apartments now under construction or contemplated. Older apartments will boost their rents to conform. Rent investigations will be made to denounce such iniquities and the "royalists" responsible therefor.

The May 1 demands seem very ill-advised; will tend to decrease the number employed in the trade over a term of years; attract outside labor; boost nonunion work in Maryland and Virginia.

Clarification Of Puerto Rican Status

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with great interest your editorial regarding "The Puerto Rican Appeal."

Will you kindly allow a Puerto Rican newspaperman respectfully to call your attention to the fact that the true Puerto Rican appeal at this moment is not the demand for Statehood, but the demand for a prompt, equitable and democratic definition of the permanent status of the island?

Such was the demand recently formulated by the Economic Convention of Puerto Rico, constituted by accredited delegations representing all fields of human endeavor in the island. The resolution passed by the convention asserts that the fact that the political status of Puerto Rico has not yet beeen determined creates a state of uneasiness and uncertainty which proves detrimental to the best interests of the island, insofar as it hinders our economic development and obstructs the intensification of our relations with the mainland; that so long as this abnormal situation persists it will be impossible to draft a plan of economic reconstruction suited to the needs of the island, and that we should request action from Congress authorizing the people of Puerto Rico to decide its political status acccording to the principle of self-determination. Such is the demand that at this very moment is voicing the Economic Delegation of Puerto Rico, now in Washington representing said convention.

There is evidently some misinformation in your statement that "the demand for Statehood again being voiced in Puerto Rico, is, in a measure at least, the reflection of a commendable desire on the part of the people of that possession to remain permanently under the shelter of the American flag." Such demand, as voiced by the Republican, Union and Socialist parties of Puerto Rico now dominating the insular legislature, is rather the partisan expression of that same desire of the Economic Convention of getting a final definition of the status of the island.

As there is a partisan demand for Statehood, voiced by the local parties advocating that solution, there is also a partisan demand for independence, voiced by the local parties advocating this other logical solution. Both demands simply state the eager desire of the people of Puerto Rico of putting an end to the present colonial system.

I agree with your statement that "what is clearly needed is a closer relationship" between the island and the mainland. But closer relationship can have no other basis than justice, freedom and mutual understanding, and to attain them the United States Government must first empower the people of Puerto Rico to determine democratically its final status. Once this is decided, there would be no difficulty in regulating the relations between the island and the mainland as it fits best to the vital interests of both parties.

It is true that "Puerto Ricans are not unmindful of the real benefits they have derived from their association with the United States during the past 40 years." But it is also true that Puerto Ricans are mindful of the fact that this so-called association has affected the insular economy in the most harmful way. Be it enough to point out the high cost of living, the absentee ownership, the large-scale land tenure, the ruin of our agriculture, the loss of markets, the curtailment of subsistence farming, the widespread unemployment, the deplorable social condition.

The actual state of things cannot be more deterrent to the well-being of the people of Puerto Rico. Furthermore, as a democratic power the United States cannot justify this un-American form of government under which Puerto Rico is ruled. I honestly believe that it is high time for Congress and the Administration to give this problem a democratic solution as would be to empower the people of Puerto Rico to decide the permanent status of the island.

Payment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By authority of the Bureau of American Ethnology, as recorded in volume 2, of the eighteenth annual report, on page 551, King Charles I granted Maryland, the territory named as "A certain region hereinafter described as a country hitherto uncultivated, in the parts of America, and partly occupied by savages having no knowledge of the Divine Being," to Lord Baltimore, on certain definite conditions.

One important condition was that the payment required be made each year and was that "two Indian arrows of those parts to be delivered at the said castle of Windsor every year on Tuesday in Easter week."

I doubt if this has been done and I am calling your attention to it so that if we want to keep that territory, someone may take it up with King George, and see if the back payments can be arranged for and the arrows delivered in the future as agreed upon.

You can understand how embarrassing it would be, not only to Maryland but to the other 47 States, to have the King take back this land because it had not been paid for. He might also with some reason suggest that the present value of the territory be ascertained and he be credited with this sum on his general account.

It is a ticklish situation and it is too bad that Maryland has neglected to send those two arrows to the castle of Windsor every Tuesday in Easter week each year.

All of these things happened a long time ago and in ordinary cases the statute of limitation would bar a recovery, but this most convenient statute does not obtain between nations of equal strength and dignity.

On Parking

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading with interest your articles about the parking problem in Washington and want to commend you for bringing more publicity to bear upon a situation that has become just about intolerable for the average motorist who has to park downtown all day.

However, negative criticism will not solve the problem. Here is a suggestion on the positive side—for whatever it may be worth.

How about a series of "parking groves" in the Mall and Potomac Park area? Start with the grove of trees just south of the Lincoln Memorial pool. By trimming out only a very few trees, lanes could be opened throughout the grove. Fully 2,000 cars could be parked in this grove alone. They would be in the shade, would be virtually out of sight, would not obstruct the long vistas of the park, and would put to double use a tract which would still serve its esthetic purpose.

I am a lover of trees and of beautiful landscaping. I hate to see any encroachment in the parks. But I am inclined to think too big a sacrifice is involved in withholding all that land right down in the congested traffic area from the pressing needs of this town's citizens.

Other parking groves could be planted, say in the northwest corner of the Monument Grounds along Constitution avenue and Seventeenth street, and east of the railroad embankment in the vicinity of the present tourist camp, or perhaps in places still nearer to the big Government buildings.

I venture a suggestion of this kind not because it is not open to some objections but because we are approaching a situation where something radical will have to be done, and possibly this might be the lesser of evils.

The Post Impressionist

Moonlight

THE OLD paddle-wheeler was low in the water, rolling and creaking with the tide and heavy with human freight. We went aboard and clambered up to the third deck. Amid three smokestacks, the walking beam of the steeple engines was silhouetted against the sky, like the balance of a giant scale. The smell of beer rose from the bar to mingle with perfumes. Girls floated past in evening gowns, holding the arms of glib-tongued lads in gaily-colored sweaters.

Looking over the rail at the wharf, we watched the late arrivals, scurrying down the boardwalk, shouting as they ran: "Hey, wait a minute; w-a-i-t a minute!"

But it was 15 minutes before the last warning blast. Another whistle shrilled near the ticket office. Guards shouted, "A-board!" The gangplank scraped on the wharf and the old boat trembled out into midstream.

The moon was a white hole in blue-velvet heavens. We sat astern, where we could see the wake churned into shattered reflections of moonlight, and the green phosphorescene of the water gurgling and racing madly away from us. But presently it grew too chilly to remain on the open moon-whitened deck. But we were sorry to leave the music of an amateur guitarist, strumming away in the darkness, his playing accompanied by several young voices.

We decided to dance.

We had to elbow and pardon-us-please our way through a cluster of gum-chewing, giggling young people. When we finally stepped on the dance platform and came into each other's arms, a special officer, or "yank man" approached us, nightstick in hand. We stopped dancing and separated immediately, wondering how we had suddenly became enemies of society. But the officer brushed past us. He grabbed a youngster by the shoulder and yanked him from the embrace of a young woman.

"Off the floor, mug," growled the boat policeman. "You ain't allowed to dance wit'out a coat."

One whirl and eight collisions later we saw the same couple. The young man, a borrowed jacket over his white ducks, was dancing his partner under the nose of his eagle-eyed nemesis, who looked daggers and bit his lip silently.

The swing orchestra, aided by scratchy amplifiers, scrambled the agony pipe, the horn and the doghouse. It amazed us to watch youngsters fling their arms and legs into great circles, twirl and spin their bodies through the air, yet do no more damage than muss the hair, bark the shins, tear the stockings and soil the white shoes of only three or four neighboring couples at a time.

Faster screamed the orchestra; faster whirled the dancers. Smiles lightened their faces, their heels twinkled. Laughter and grunts of pleasure hummed over the floor and sifted down from the balcony of observers overhead. We were caught by the hypnotic spirit of the music and the physical mass of the crowd.

We strolled around the decks. We looked straight ahead, chatting and stamping our shoes as we walked along, pretending not to see the inhabitants of dark, windy corners. But we too were overpowered by Cupid and his numerous deputies. We found seclusion in the bow of the boat, where, wedged between the flagstaff and a pile of folded deck-chairs, we stole a kiss.

The boat's spotlight stabbed the silent shores of Virginia and Maryland. Hooting, our steamer swept past tugs grunt-puffing their strings of sand barges up river. Another moonlight boat passed alongside, with glittering lights and a blare of syncopated rhythm. Her rails were studded with hand-waving groups.

Pleasure craft of all sizes and shapes passed in the night, their sparkling reflections dancing over the dark waters. Presently our steamer turned in a wide circle and paddled and slapped at the historic Potomac, her wooden arms churning homeward over the water.

We passed Mount Vernon and sleeping Alexandria, then went below for a last dance.

The crowd on the floor was chanting "So the itty bitty fishes, in the itty bitty poo," grimacing the choruses like precocious children just learning to speak. We relaxed, and rose and fell resignedly on the bosom of the mob.

Several minutes later I whispered reassuringly, "We're near Hains Point. We'll dock soon."

But a long time passed before we felt the boat shudder against the wharf, and heard the gangplank scrape on the deckboards. While the "cats" joined in the final notes of a lyric, and stomping couples leered happily at each other, we finally broke loose from the coagulated mass of jitterbugs and fled ashore.

Dilemma?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: More than once, with all the emphasis of large type and displayed position, you assured your readers that the recent visit of the King of England was "epochal" and "history making." I think you should tell us why you so regard it.

Whenever Englishmen are reproached with the survival in their polity of the antique incongruity of a King, they respond that the King amounts to nothing; that he is only a figurehead; that he has nothing to do with the government.

How can the coming of a figurehead be "epochal" or "history making" or of the slightest importance? And if this King is not a figurehead, if he is of vital significance in the government of his country, then you are thrown back upon the other horn of the dilemma.

For he occupies that significant place not by the choice of the people but by the persistence of the ancient nonsensical dogma of divine right, and how can a democracy recognize, subscribe to and applaud any such doctrine? Yet that is exactly what we were doing when we indulged in a nightmare of jubilation over this visit.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

King Takes Risk

IN GREETING Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, the King of England smiled and inquired, "Cotton Ed Smith?" A recognition which pleased the Southern statesman so greatly that he remarked with pride, "That name has gone around the world." Americans invariably respond kindly to the use of the nicknames by which they are known to their fellow citizens, as I believe Mr. Jimmy Cox, of Dayton, Ohio, and Miami, Fla., will affirm out of his experience at the time when he was running—or, to say the least, trudging—for the office of President and came to an occasion during the campaign which was adorned by the presence of the late John McGraw.

Mr. McGraw had been known for many years and in many lands as Muggsy, a name which referred to his career with the robustious Baltimore Orioles and his earlier and less dignified seasons with the New York Giants, but as baseball took on gravity and he became conscious of the dignity of his position as a field executive and stockholder of a soulless corporation he determined that "Muggsy" should be buried along the rough path which he had trod to where he now found himself.

Dignified McGraw Disliked 'Muggsy'

THERE MAY have been some announcement of this decision, but if so it was not made in carrying tones, and Mr. Cox's etiquettician, or protocol officer, either did not know or forgot to inform him of the proprieties, with the embarrassing result that when the Democratic nominee, meaning to be pleasant, addressed Mr. McGraw as Muggsy in the presence of a sea of fine, intelligent American faces, Mr. McGraw was like to bust him right square on the snoot and forebore only as a sacrifice to the party of his loyal adherence.

Long after the name which once had been his pride had become a forbidden form of address, either in his presence or in print under the by-line of any journalist wishing to be called his friend, Mr. McGraw was plagued by incidents in which his manners warred with his temper and usually lost because admirers on being introduced would beam stupidly and remark, "Well well! So this is the great Muggsy McGraw!"

Many Are Allergic To Their Nicknames

NOR WAS IT wise to address Mr. Bing Miller, of Connie Mack's forces, as Booker T. Miller, or just plain Booker, in reference to his beachcomber's tan, although Athletic opponents, on mischief bent, sometimes called him so from behind a scorecard as they rode the bench. And his Majesty, the King, would have endangered that fine Anglo-American friendship to which Mr. Rooosevelt referred so feelingly had he met Mr. Bill Klem, the National League umpire, who, like the King, maintains that he can do no wrong, or, anyway, that he hasn't done so yet, and greeted him as Catfish.

Perhaps Phil Scott, the retired heavyweight pugilist, being a loyal subject of His Majesty, would withhold a swipe across the royal features were the King, with his retentive ear for nicknames, to call him Fainting Phil to his face, but a man of lesser rank would not be safe.

Still Others Take Pleasure In Familiarity

ONE NEVER KNOWS, without the precaution of discreet inquiry, whether the picturesque names by which Americans are known to their fellow citizens are even tolerable to the individuals concerned. Mr. Abe Singletooth Yeager, a pugilist's agent, takes pleasure in his descriptive nickname, but Mr. Honest Abe Attell, who would seem to have nothing to resent, does not receive his title kindly because it was conferred in derision to commemorate his role as genius of the only fake that has ever disgraced the World Series, so far as the public knows.

The late John F. Hylan, although proud of his ruggedness and his Irishness, would not permit anyone to call him Red Mike to his face, although he was so known, and not always without respect, to those whom he considered not his fellow citizens but his subjects. Bath House John Coughlin, of Chicago, was proud to be known as The Bath. Huey Long not only permitted but himself used the title of Kingfish, and the Rev. Pussyfoot Johnson's true name never was used, even by him, except, perhaps, on legal papers.

His Majesty tempted his luck and got away with it in the case of Cotton Ed Smith, but there was an instant when the fate of nations might have trembled in the balance.

Books And Things

Agassiz: The Genial Genius

DURING his lifetime Louis Agassiz possessed, along with his genius, a second invaluable characteristic. He inspired instant affection from almost everyone he met. The power still inheres in his memory, Mabel L. Robinson, his latest biographer, in "Runner of the Mountain Tops" (Random House, $3), confesses she was moved to the task by the sheer magnetism of the man, surviving through his work and tradition.

Naturally such a book breathes enthusiasm, and is less concerned with what might be called factual fossils than with atmospheric effects. Miss Robinson describes the career of Agassiz as a "headlong splendid race through life."

His parents were Swiss, his father a village pastor. It is strange that the four children born before Louis died in infancy, yet he inherited marvelous vitality and health. Well disciplined and carefully taught, Louis showed great promise from his earliest years. Mind and body were incessantly active. While he was a student at the University of Zurich, a wealthy Genevan who met him by chance was so impressed by the youth's intelligence and appearance that he offered to adopt him.

Louis himself refused, preferring the parents he had. Miss Robinson is of the opinion that he also needed the steadying effect of comparative poverty, else his ambitions might have been dissipated in "a shower of firework sparks."

As it was he had difficulty in channeling his talent. But a medical training was excellent as a preface to natural history. And somehow Agassiz took a doctorate of philosophy before he got his medical degree. When he should have been building up a practice subsequently, he was too busy studying the secrets of the Alpine rocks and lakes.

He seems to have leaped from subject to subject, within the wide realm of natural history. And he might be said to have landed ultimately on a great glacier, the theory of the Ice Age.

Agassiz married young. His wife was often left behind while he pursued his vocation. Sometimes she had to keep house for the assistants and students he collected as inevitably as he collected specimens. He visited Cuvier and Humbolt in France, and gained their recognition; he was welcomed by Lyell and other distinguished men of science in England; but his wife stayed at home with the children.

AT LENGTH Europe became too small for Agassiz. He looked toward America. He came, saw and conquered. There is an exquisite fitness in the circumstance that in Boston Agassiz found "an audience well supplied with ladies who listened with ardor to his lectures on 'Les glaciers et l'epoque glaciaire.'" And Boston was to afford him support for the great museum and staff which he was born to call into existence. More, Boston won and kept him when he might have returned either to Zurich or to Paris to positions of high honor and accordant pay. Boston also gave him his second wife.

His first wife never saw America; she died before she could join her husband. Later he married Elizabeth Cary, who adored him and made a happy home for his two children by the first marriage.

Agassiz loved America and became nationally popular. It is amusing that even he remarked on the "speed" of American life; it is an echo of the golden age to hear that he saw no beggars or unemployment, outside New York.

He died in 1873, very suddenly, without pain or warning, aged 66. It is not too much to say of him that he had had everything. Miss Robinson has made a charming book about him; if it has a fault, it is too short and, therefore, sometimes wanting in specific details.

A different phase of our golden age, the Arcadian rather than the Athenian, is recalled in Dane Coolidge's "Old California Cowboys" (Dutton, $2.50). Or it might be called the age of chivalry, of the horsemen. Here the author writes from personal memory and participation. With uncommon prescience, he took photographs; and the pictures here reproduced are as good as the text, which is to say, both are admirable.

Mr. Coolidge knows and makes clear the local differences. How distinct they were is exemplified by a brief conversation between riders meeting on the way to a rodeo. "Did you see three Americans going by?" A Mexican vaquero replied: "No. One American and two Texanos."

MEXICANS, Texans and Californians all had their own habits, customs and slight variations in attire. The original California style vanished years ago; but a pleasant anecdote packs it neatly. A ranchero of the true California breed, son of an American Army officer and a lady of Spanish blood from Santa Fe, J. L. Hubbell (known as Don Lorenzo) had a new majordomo, or ranch steward. At the end of the first month the majordomo said: "Don Lorenzo, do you realize how many meals you have given away?" . . . "Why, no; how many?" . . . "Three thousand four hundred and forty-two." . . . "Well, Manuel, you are a new man and that is very well for the first month. But next month try to give away 6,884.

The old order changed; Henry Miller was the archetype of the transition. He made ranching pay in a big way. But the cowboys didn't change much; and their individuality, the peculiar feel of freedom in their way of life, and the seemingly timeless quality of the open ranges, which, in fact, were vanishing so rapidly, are caught with elusive skill. Most of the book, perhaps all, refers to a period which ended with the war.

Mr. Coolidge's writings have not received the appreciation they merit. They have genuine literary value; and with no depreciation of other excellent writers covering the same territory, it may be said that if better books on the West are to be written, Mr. Coolidge will write them. At present he is top hand.

Harrington Assails Limits on WPA

administrator aimed a shaft, without specifically saying so, at the proposed abolition of the Federal theater project.

The arts projects (including theater and writers' projects) "represent an experiment which is making a real contribution to cultural values in American life and they are providing a suitable type of employment for persons who may become just as hungry as construction workers," Harrington said.

Asks Centralization

Admitting that "mistakes have been made," the administrator proposed certain changes in the management of the arts projects, including the centralizing of their directors in Washington.

Harrington reminded the committee that "a great number of outstanding professional people in the fields of writing and theater have highly recommended these projects."

Broaching the highly controversial subject of the relations between the WPA and Workers Alliance, Harrington insisted that "it is my policy to deal on equal terms with all labor organizations where their requests are properly presented."

Of the Workers Alliance

Testimony repeatedly given the committee that the Workers Alliance is a tool of the Communists drew from Col. Harrington the observation that "I cannot avoid feeling that representations that the Workers Alliance is a 'subversive' organization have been considerably exaggerated."

"I can certainly say that so far as my personal dealings have been concerned, no improper request has been presented to me by that organization and no demand has been made of me as a demand," the administrator continued.

He said that "perhaps the proportion of Communists in the Workers Alliance is relatively high."

"I do not know," he said. "However, if that is the case, I do not think it is unusual, because the Workers Alliance is recruiting its membership from project workers who have been pretty severely buffeted by fate, who have taken an economic licking and whose normal tendency would be to align themselves with a political party which promised a Utopia in which everyone would be happy and prosperous."

In answer to criticisms of WPA's administrative costs, which, it is believed, the new relief bill will strictly limit, Harrington said the figure for the current fiscal year is 3.3 per cent, although the law allows 5 per cent. He said the average salary of WPA administrative employes was $1,581, or $290 under the average for Government service.

A Real Aid To Business

By Ernest K. Lindley

Tax Readjustments

MOST OF THE newspaper headlines I saw about the changes in the social security act voted by the House emphasized the easing of the load on "business." That is important. It is estimated that about $380,000,000 in taxes will be saved next year, and about $1,710,000,000 during the next three years, by freezing the old-age insurance tax at 1 per cent on the worker and 1 per cent on the employer and by allowances on unemployment insurance contributions.

The social security taxes reduce buying power in two ways: by trimming pay checks and by increasing the costs of doing business and so, in many cases, prices to all buyers. The tax readjustments voted by the House are a real aid to economic recovery. So are two of the changes in the old-age insurance plan: liberalizing the payments in the early years and advancing the date on which benefits are begun to be paid by two years, to January 1, 1940.

Big Reserve Fund To Be Decreased

THE COMBINED effect of these changes in the old-age insurance system is to knock out the monstrous reserve fund provided by the original act at the request of the Administration but over the objection of its best economists. It may please Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, one of the most effective critics of the huge reserve fund, to know that when it was first proposed, Rexford G. Tugwell sweat blood trying to convince the President that it would be a serious, perhaps disastrous, economic depressant.]

On the side of outgo the amendments adopted by the House amount to a major revision, especially of the old-age insurance scheme. When the ordinary wage earner or salaried man with a wife and children finds out what is in these amendments he will breathe a sigh of relief—assuming, of course, that they are adopted by the Senate, as they probably will be. For they change what was a system of compulsory saving for old age into a fairly broad form of life insurance.

Suppose you, the head of the family, are unfortunate enough to catch pneumonia and die next January. You have a wife and three children under the age of 18. Under the present act, they would receive a small lump sum equal to a percentage of your earnings during the preceding three years. Under the new plan they would receive $51.50 a month. Up to a maximum of twice what is called your primary insurance benefit each of your children would receive one-half that benefit, and your widow would receive three-quarters of that benefit until your youngest child reaches the age of 18. Then at the age of 65 she would again receive three-quarters of your primary insurance benefit. If you leave no widow and no children, but have a dependent parent, that parent would receive one-half of your primary benefit.

Protection Broader, Better Balanced

UNDER THE revised plan your own contributions as a wage earner are used to buy a combination of survivor insurance and old-age annuity. It is estimated that, except in the extreme case of a person who works 45 years for a minimum of $250 a month, your contributions will buy more of this combined protection than you could buy by paying the same monthly sums to a private insurance company.

The employers' contributions, on the other hand, are apportioned according to a different principle, which may be described as "social adequacy." They are used to increase the payments during the early years of the system, to increase the benefits to low-wage earners, to pay benefits to widows and wives when they reach the age of 65.

It is easy to quarrel with many of the details of this proposed revision of the old-age insurance system, but the result is a much broader and better balanced protection for the great majority of workers.

Under public assistance, the House amendments take a step forward by increasing the Federal aid to needy dependent children from one-third to one-half of the total cost. They also increase Federal aid to the blind and the needy aged who are unprotected by old-age insurance to a maximum of $20 a month. For the needy aged, the House plan fails to meet the recommendation of the Social Security Board that the formula for allocating money to the States be altered so that the poorer States can get more help from the Federal Government. This is an omission which the Senate should take care of.

One Weakness Lies In Idle Aid Angle

THE WEAKEST part of the House revision is that which affects unemployment compensation. The House would let States which have met certain requirements and built up reserves of stipulated size reduce their unemployment compensation taxes. It is reasonable to grant tax reductions to individual industries in which employment is kept relatively stable. But why should a whole State receive them? The effect is to sharpen the inequality of taxation among States, and so to move away from, instead of toward, fair competition. Before any further tinkering is done with unemployment compensation, the system should be put on a straight Federal basis, like old-age insurance.

After Danzig, What?

By S. Miles Bouton

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Is The Reich Reconciled To War?

THE UNUSUAL LACK of boastful speeches by leading Nazis and of tirades in the German press in the last days has again encouraged optimists to believe that Germany, whose economic and financial situation grows worse daily, but who is rushing her rearming at highest speed, has abandoned aggressive ideas. Hitler, they tell us, will negotiate peacefully for the return of Danzig, and there will be no war.

On May 12 Dr. Goebbels held a confidential session with the official "Reichsredner," the party orators. He told them, among other things:

"The Fuehrer has set the day and hour for bringing Danzig back home."

The date, he said, was known only to Rudolf Hess, commissioned with the political preparations; to Goering, commander of the air forces; to Gen. von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the army; and to Mussolini. No intimation as to the date was given, but rumor has it in Berlin that it is a day in September.

According to an earlier report, the plan is for the Danzig Senate and Nazi party leaders to declare that Danzig is "a free city" under German sovereignty, to declare the tariff union and other connections with Poland null and void, and to introduce universal military conscription. In case Poland takes any measures against "the initiative of the city of Danzig," the Danzig government will regard itself as unlawfully attacked," and will call on the Reich for military aid.

ON HIS TRIP of inspection of the German fortifications in the West, Hitler reached Karlsruhe with Gen. von Brauchitsch and his party on May 17. In a speech that evening he declared that all democratic conjectures about a slacking off in the situation were nonsense, and added:

"I shall, with unaltered decision and energy, continue on the way which you all know and along which I have been going openly before your eyes. If fate so will, I shall not hesitate to call on you for the highest sacrifice, and I know that the whole nation will then follow me."

There is obviously growing doubt in wide circles in Germany about the possibility of avoiding war. Joachim von Ribbentrop told Foreign Minister Ciano last month that only Rudolf Hess and his immediate friends believe that Hitler can effectuate his program without war. Even if Danzig could be peacefully obtained, he said, it would be impossible to extend the position thus won without a conflict. Goering himself had said that the day of diplomatic finesse was past—Germany's opponents could no longer be frightened or impressed by propaganda.

TWO MORE GENERALS have been dismissed because they openly opposed Goering's strategy and rejected the thesis that Germany could venture a "Blitzkrieg" (lightning war). They are Gen. von Liebmann of the infantry, commander of the war academy, who has been superseded by Maj. Gen. Eugen Mueller, and Gen. Geyer, also of the infantry, who is succeeded by Lieut. Gen. Ruoff.

Nor is it only high military officers who see the situation clearly. In his talk to the official party orators, Dr. Goebbels said that he knew that many of them also doubted the possibility of "warless solutions," and he instanced the case of Dr. G. Kaemmerling, vice propaganda leader and district press chief for Leipzig. He was arrested a few days before Goebbels spoke, discharged from his post and imprisoned in the Moabit jail.

The charge was "superfluous and improper criticism of the Reich government" and neglect of duty. In the foregoing six weeks, reported Goebbels, Kaemmerling had expressed doubts as to the possibility of a peaceful solution of the situation if Germany should persist in her demands. "In a sharp dispute with his superiors he openly denied the possibility of a diplomatic success or even of a military victory of the axis."

MORE IMPORTANT and significant was a hot altercation between Lieut. Gen. Horst von Metzsch, former inspector of education of the army and now head of its military psychological bureau, on the one side, and Goebbels, Goering and Heinrich Himmler, head of the Gestapo (Secret Political Police), on the other. Goebbels began with a disquisition on propaganda, and said that he and Hitler were both of the opinion that the slogan "anti-capitalism" had been chiefly responsible for all success within Germany, and that its employment abroad had also had good reactions both at home and in other countries.

The best way to offset foreign assertions about Hitler's "hegemony efforts" lay in a synthesis of the slogans "anti-capitalism," "pan-Europe" and "pacifism" through the reorganizing of Europe along the lines of the Rosenberg-Hitler theory of the threefold political-military-economic racial hierarchy. Thus the "racial theory deeply rooted in the people" would be drawn into this synthesis, and one could present the aim as a permanent European peace, whose active propaganda side would naturally be "world capitalism," "world Jewry," "city and Wall Street," "church politics" and "Bolshevism."

GEN. VON METZSCH declared that he regarded the domestic effect of this as small. Himmler called him a "pessimist," and Goebbels interjected that the general did not realize the power of suggestion and the conception of a totalitarian state. Himmler said Metzsch's book on "Wehrpolitik" (military policy) would never have been published if he and Goebbels had not been away at the time, and Goebbels declared that the book, like all the general's writings, was based on erroneous judgments and poor observation.

Metzsch wanted to know where Goebbels had learned so much about soldiers under fire—an unkind remark. The propaganda minister grew red and asked whether the general would deny that he, Goebbels, had done more to create a greater Germany than Metzsch. The general answered that without Himmler's police and Black Shirts the people would long ago have stopped listening to Goebbels.

Gen. von Metzsch asked Himmler whether he thought that by arresting a third of the comedians who appeared in Berlin cabarets he could put an end to insulting jokes about the Nazis. Unfortunately, he continued, not all the people could be placed in concentration camps, nor could history be silenced by the same method. He held to the theory that in the long run all propaganda would be powerless against hunger and artillery shells. The concentration camp could perhaps conquer hunger, but could not conquer the enemy. There was, moreover, a mighty difference between the days of rearming and the days of war. Those who stood for an expanding policy of the Third Reich had different reasons for it, according to their social position, but the approval of the governmental acts of the leaders by the people had been based always on the maintaining of peace.

AS LEADER of the office charged with dealing with the popular psychology, continued Gen. von Metzsch, he had to do only with the masses and the civilian population behind the fronts. The views and attitude of the members of the National Socialist Party had nothing to do with him; they were matters for the party and not for the army. And he added that "the German people lack an understanding of the necessity of expansion at the cost of war."

Precisely Goebbels' propaganda, said von Metzsch, had created a popular feeling that war was unnecessary, and the talk about economic agreements, about "peace through trade," had strengthened this feeling. The opinions and attitude of the party members were, of course, decisive in questions of domestic policy and eventually of civil war, but they had a negligible influence on the possibilities of the developments of an international war, since here "all the people and not merely 10 per cent of the people as a party must be considered."

Himmler then declared heatedly that he hoped that Metzsch would never speak in this manner in the presence of irresponsible persons. The general thereupon said he regarded his presence as no longer necessary. He would report to Hitler in writing through Hess' bureau his attitude and his proposals, and he fired this parting shot:

"You live surrounded by bootlickers and babblers, who vilify everybody, and you don't know how to deal with the indiscretions of your own surroundings. And you expect me to keep quiet about the signs of danger in respect of the dependability of the people?"

The general thereupon left, followed by Goebbels' remark to Hess:

"What do we care about this pessimist's remarks?"

IT IS REPORTED that Gen. von Metzsch has been ostracized in the officers' quarters for a long time. Some fear that they will bring suspicion upon themselves by associating with him, others say that he will soon be dismissed.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

King's Soliloquy

Now the tour is over,
Now the trip is done;
No more routines endless—
Boy, but sleep is fun!

Now the visit's ended,
Now the ordeal's o'er;
We can give attention
To our feet so sore.

Good will? You can have it;
It is lovely stuff . . .
To the point where, really,
It gets pretty rough.

Amity? We love it;
Discord is a sin;
We are all for friendship,
But it's done us in.

Peace is all important,
Harmony means joy;
Both got our indorsement—
How we suffered, boy!

Better understanding
We have tried to bring—
But we're very weary
Of that sort of thing.

Brotherhood is splendid—
Sisterhood is, too—
(Welcoming receptions
Make one black and blue.)

Uncle Sam and Britain
Must stand side by side;
If they don't, please never Say we haven't tried.

Friendship's been cemented,
As was our intent;
(But our "dogs" are burning
From the hot cement.)

England loves dear Sammie,
Sam loves England, yes;
But it was quite wearing
On both me and Bess.

Anyhow it's over;
Our one wish is clear—
No more locomotives
For at least a year!

No more dedications—
No more hands to shake;
How our ankles pain us!
How our wrists do ache.

L'Envoi

Hark! "God Save the King"
They're playing still, and I'm Certain that they saved us
In the nick of time!

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Exercise Only Way Of Keeping Thighs Firm and Smooth

YOU CAN'T LOOK like your "old sylph" in a bathing suit unless your thighs are firm and smooth. This portion of the figure hibernates in conventional clothes for 10 months out of the year but, come summer, you make a quick change into a swim suit—and wish to heaven it were a little longer!

The perfect thigh measurement varies from 19 inches for the slight girl to 22 inches for the girl with the large structure. Take the measurement just above the middle of the upper leg—at the largest part. The Hollywood standard for the thigh measurement is three and one-half times the size of the wrist, so the average girl with a six-inch wrist should have a 21-inch thigh.

But, even with normal weight and a perfect measurement you can have the disfiguring lumps and hollows that go with flabby musculature. Exercise is the only way of keeping this measurement lovely. There's as much of a knack to firming the thigh muscles as there is to firming the hips. It's simple—just a side-to-side swing and it works just as well for bulges as for hollows. Begin with this one:

POSITION: Lie on the back on the floor, knees flexed and feet together on the floor.

MOVEMENT: Slowly and forcibly spread the knees as far apart as possible. Bring them together and repeat 10 times, concentrating on the outward movement, which should orginate at the hips. This exercise is easy but it is especially good for developing a smooth inner thighline.

The next exercise includes both the inner and outer thighs and once you get the technique down pat you will have no trouble. Follow the directions carefully.

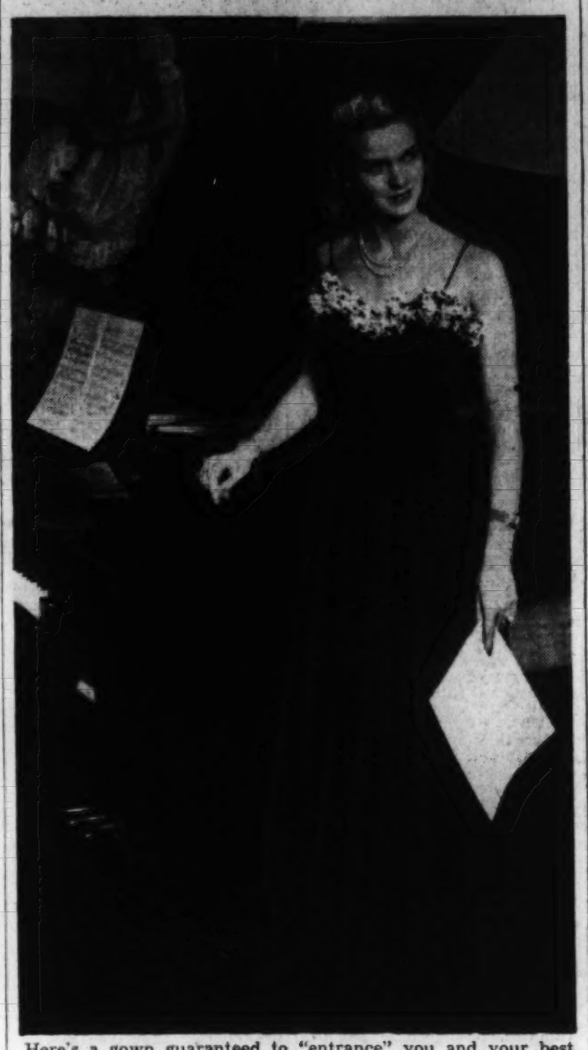

POSITION: Sit on the floor and lean back on the left elbow. Have the left leg straight down on the floor but turned outward slightly to bring the soft pad of fat on the side into direct contact with the floor. Flex the right knee with the foot up close to the hip and on the floor. Have the right hand on floor in back of body. All set?

MOVEMENT: Bounce! Hoist your left hip off the floor, using the left elbow, left foot and right foot and right hand as levers, and bring it back down on the floor in a bouncing movement, being sure to hit the fat pad every time. Continue for 20 counts and arrange yourself in the same position so that you can bounce on the right hip for the same number of counts.

Lilac Time for Debutantes

Here's a gown guaranteed to "entrance" you and your best beau at the many important current parties this season. It has enough fragile elegance to make a woman feel feminine, yet the dark navy blue of the very full-skirted gown gives it a quiet assurance. The shoe-string straps and becomingly shirred bodice are details to enhance natural charms. And the delicate white lilacs nestling above the curved decollete are just winsome enough to lend enchantment to even regal evenings

Emerald Isle Salad, Tasteful In Hot Weather

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

THE TRADITIONAL luck of the Irish you will believe is yours when you discover this tart, tangy salad.

Emerald Isle Salad

Soften 1 envelope gelatin in ½ cup cold water. Add ½ cup sugar and ½ cup hot water and stir until dissolved. Add ¼ cup mild vinegar, green coloring and cool. When it begins to stiffen, add ½ cup blanched almonds or other nuts, ½ cup stuffed olives sliced, ½ cup sliced canned pineapple, ½ cup small sweet cucumber pickles and ¼ teaspoon salt. Pickles should be sliced thin, almonds chopped and pineapple cut in small pieces. Turn into individual molds that have been rinsed in cold water. Chill and when firm, unmold on salad greens and serve with mayonnaise.

Housewife Must Learn to Discard Old Furnishings

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

MOST oldish couples are inclined to cling to their possessions so that they crowd their homes too much. But Mrs. B. had the courage to pick and choose from among her old things. The rug she used on the new living room floor wasn't her biggest and best rug by any means, but it was the one that best suited the new house—an unusual Oriental with a light cocoa brown ground. Then she had the walls painted in a light cocoa brown too, which gave a restful spacious effect. The large sofa is covered in a self stripe cocoa colored material and for it Mrs. B. has made a pair of needle point cushions with sage green ground. The two fireside chairs are linen slip covered with a sage green ground and a flowered design. Two other chairs have needlepoint covers, one with a rust ground and the other in green.

The curtains are white with draperies in plain sage green. The lamps and accessories are white, and Mrs. B. tries to keep white flowers around. Several paintings on the walls are predominantly white and green. In fact these pictures and the rug were the things that she keyed the room to.

This isn't a sophisticated room at all, but it has style and comfort unusual for a middle-aged room. Mr. and Mrs. B. enjoy it and the children are as proud as punch to bring their friends home.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Intimidated by Cruelly Perverse Husband, Sunk in Despair, Young Wife Asks What to Do

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Less than a year ago I married a man ten years my senior. He is very opinionated and will never admit any faults on his part. I was a widow with two children when we married. The children had been boarding with a splendid family and I did not bring them to live with us for a few weeks. During that time we had few peaceful days. . . .

My husband seems to be a mentally retarded man. Every little incident that arises in the home throws him into a tantrum, during which he verbally abuses me for incompetence. His faculty for making mountains out of molehills and flying into rages drives me nearly insane. The abuse he piles on me, and the horrid things he says, nearly break my heart.

He will burst into a tirade and then go about the house with a grim expression on his face; come to the table and not speak one word; go to bed silent, get up, eat his breakfast and leave for the office without a word. This has lasted as long as five days, and to restore peace I have to appear humble and apologetic before he will be himself again. I dare not discuss any troubles I have had during the day, or mention any problem which a little advice from a sympathetic listener might solve. He lays the blame for everything on me; says I have it coming to me. . . .

I make every effort to keep him happy, by doing the things I think will please him. I have even given up church attendance for the time being. Can it be that I am to blame for letting this thing go on? Am I too easily subdued? Psychotheraphy is out of the question. He would take me to be treated if I were even to mention such a thing. He would say it was me, not him, who needed treatment. And it might not be a bad idea, if it would teach me to help myself. But something MUST be done, as I am about ready to seek the peace that most appeals to weary souls. Thank you for the comfort I have had in the past, from reading your column; and for any help you may be able to give me at this time. UNHAPPY.

Road to Salvation

DEAR UNHAPPY: Have you ever read "David Copperfield?" You will find in the pages of this heart-wringing classic a male character of the name of Mr. Murdstone, who is the fictional prototype of your husband. Mr. Murdstone was a middle-aged man of sadistic tendency who married a naively tender, trustful, malleable young widow with one small son. His personality and performance were colored by cruelty which welled up, like the waters of a secret spring, from some dark psychological cesspool in the center of his nature.

Their marriage became a nightmare experience for the young wife, since no concessions she could make, nor any amount of of gentle and hopeful diplomacy which she brought into play, could alter the abnormal pattern in which his personality was fixed. In this character, the author gives you a man who derives morbid satisfaction from visiting suffering upon defenceless innocents committed to his guardianship. Such a man might have been thought, in his day, to be possessed of the devil; but today he would be diagnosed as an extremely neurotic individual, whose neurosis found expression in sadistic abuse of intimates or dependents.

In Dickens' day, a situation of this kind probably would have evoked the fatalistic philosophical observation that "what can't be cured must be endured." But fortunately for you, times and social viewpoints have changed. Today, in this country, at least, social legislation takes sufficient account of the inviolable dignity of the human spirit to provide ways and means of protecting men and women from ruthless subjugation at the hands of their fellows.

With such legal redress available, there exists no valid reason why you should submit, passively and indefinitely, to the kind of debasement and exploitation—(and I have reference to certain particulars omitted in order to preserve your anonymity)—which you have suffered since your marriage. To countenance (thus tacitly encouraging) your husband's outrageous behavior is voluntarily to relinquish your moral (as well as your citizen's) rights to that freedom of conscience and independence of action which is indispensable to constructive living. Moreover, to continue in this case to endure is to make your children the hapless fellow victims of your craven passivity. To the extent that you permit your own spirit to be degraded before their eyes, to that extent do you conspire in a crime against their spirits.

The facts are these: Your husband is a pronounced neurotic, whose demoralizing influence on your life is bad enough, but whose vicious influence on your children's lives is unquestionably worse. You recognize the fact that he is, and will remain, obstinately blind to the fact that the seeds of marital discord are resident in himself. You have found him to be cruel, selfish, unreasonable (irrational, almost), unpredictable, insatiable in his demands, orgiastic in his rages, unappeasable in his moods—utterly undependable, indeed, in his whole relationship with you. You know from experience that you are powerless either to correct his deportment or to effect a saving adjustment to it. You know, in brief, that the marriage is a tragic mistake.

Doesn't it follow, then, that legal separation (or absolute divorce) constitutes the only common sense solution of the problem? And isn't it your responsibility, as your children's rational guardian, to see that such action is taken? I think so. And I am sure you would agree, instantaneously, if this were another person's problem, and not your own.

You have let yourself into a painfully difficult situation, which is bound to get worse, rather than better, if permitted to drift. Having realized your mistake, it is time to correct it. If you are without funds to employ legal counsel—take your problem to the Legal Aid Bureau, 1409 L street northwest, NAtional 8674. No constructive purpose is served in crying over spilled milk; and none in hopelessly enduring a progressively demoralizing relationship. In my opinion, your mental and social salvation depends on your withdrawing, immediately, outside the sphere of this man's influence. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Drinking of Milk Helps Finger Nails

Hollywood, Calif.—Marie Wilson, whose fluttery hands helped her screen career, keeps them groomed to perfection and boasts that she has never had a brittle or broken fingernail.

She drinks plenty of milk because split nails often result from insufficient calcium. She massages warm castor oil into the tips each night, always wears cotton gloves when working in the garden. When playing in a rough-and-tumble scene before the cameras, she protects her own nails with artificial ones.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Typical Sabbath crack at a good New York restaurant. The pretty cashier surveys the half-empty room and asks the head waiter, "Where's the business?" "Out at the Fair," remarks that functionary, dismally. And he's right, too . . .

Theaters and night clubs have taken a terrible whipping from the Flushing fandango, so far. Broadway is miserable. Shows close quicker than opera hats. Night clubs starve. The food problem at the Fair is now well solved. Plenty of places, and all prices. The top-drawer eating-house is the French pavilion. Reservations must be made a week ahead, nearly—I hear that even Eve Curie, author of her mother's biography, couldn't get a table. And I must admit, as one who has eaten its grub, that the French spot's food is something to roll the eyes about. And, of course, you don't get it for buttons. Not even gold buttons.

WHAT A NATURAL! With Papa's Day coming up Sunday, what could be more perfect than signing up Mary Martin (the Texas trick) as chairman of the theatrical division of the celebration? This year's Broadway belle is still telling the customers that her heart belongs to Pater, since neither the heat nor the Fair has been able to kill off her show . . .

Open-air art shows are a regular summer symptom here. The sculptors' show, on a vacant lot a block from my door, is in its second month, and the past week has seen Washington Square and nearby Greenwich Village streets blooming with the creations of no less than 290 artists, including many girls . . .

Who came to town the other day but Lady Williams Taylor, who lives in Nassau, down Bahamas way. She's Brenda Ducky Darling Frazier's grandma, and all this month she is being partied all around town. Brenda's been around here lately, too. Wonder if she's glad that she is now a "post-deb," or whether she'll miss the popping of flash-bulbs in her pretty eyes!

WELL, HOW do you like the season's hats by now? There seem to be few happy mediums on local heads. Either the girls are wearing cartwheel sailors too big to jam through a taxi door, or else turbans wound about the skull. Some of these are printed cottons made from tablecloths imported from Belgium. As for the wide sailors, white and black straws prevail—as is always the case, somehow.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Leisure Class

I

How does it happen that every ad that I scan,
Shows outfits galore to wear on the given;
And swim suits and play clothes for life down by the sea,
And costumes for tennis and to wear on the tee;
Garb for spectator sports and for country week-ends,
Ensembles for picnickers, cruisers, equestriennes;
When every woman that I know is bewailing her sad fate,
That she cannot get time to make one frivolous date?

II

How does it happen that all writers, speakers, preveniers of crime,
Are giving us advice on how to spend our leisure time;
How to make hobbies fill up our long, long days,
How to gain self-improvement in manifold ways;
How to reform all the neighbors, aid the city and State;
How to work off our energy and a new world create;
When every woman you meet is rushing in all out of breath,
Panting incoherently she is nearly rushed to death?

The Vitamin Girls

"What are you going to order?"

"Let's see . . . . I really need B I. Is there any liver on the menu?"

"I don't see any. I need C. I'm taking orange juice."

"They say tomato juice is better."

"I don't like it."

"Yes, but they say tomato juice gives you—well, more umph."

"All right, I'll take a double order."

"Well, I don't see how I'm going to get my B I if they don't have any liver. Wait—now, what do sweetbreads have?"

"I don't know. Waiter! . . . What vitamins do we get with sweetbreads? . . . no, what vitamins? . . . Yes, I know we get rolls, but what vitamins? . . . Oh, he doesn't know! It does look as if they'd have waiters who know such things."

"I need calcium. I'll take a glass of milk."

"Milk is fattening."

"Not if you don't eat other things. Say, waiter! . . . How many calories in a glass of milk? . . . Oh, all right . . . He says he doesn't know. I don't see why they don't print it on the menu."

"You know what I'd like—this fried chicken . . . with the corn fritters!"

"I'd like these sweetbreads . . . and some iced tea. . . . and that Boston cream pie for dessert. Still . . ."

"Of course the thing we ought to do is to take a vegetable plate . . . and a glass of buttermilk . . ."

"I know, but . . . Well, what's on the vegetable plate?"

"Let's see . . . buttered carrots, stringless beans——"

"I can't bear it!"

"Well, of course, we could have some of the fried chicken . . . and some sweetbreads and take big orders of carrots on the side——"

"The carrots would spoil everything—still, I ought to get my B . . . and my C."

"I tell you what let's do! Let's take the fried chicken and sweetbreads . . . and the iced tea . . . and the Boston cream pie . . . without the carrots—and then afterward buy some vitamins——"

"That's a perfectly grand idea! Waiter!"

Paradise Enow

WANTED: A vacation spot where there are no auto horns; no radio loudspeakers; no aroma of wet bathing suits or picnic lunches; no advertising pamphlets; no children on coaster wagons; no adults on bicycles; no oversize women—or men—in slacks or shorts; no unexpected old acquaintances from the home town; no early risers; no late goers to bed; no inconveniences of either nature or civilization; no stock market reports; no news of Europe.

Cowboy Tunes Pep-Up Parties

WHAT GRAND fun these summer evenings to get together and sing the songs of the old West. And when it's a lively favorite like "Little Joe, the Wrangler," you have to let yourself go!

"Little Joe the wrangler, he'll wrangle never more.
His days with the remuda they are gone;
'Twas a year ago last April when he rode into our camp;
Just a little Texas stray and all alone."

Nothing easier to learn than these stirring, folksy songs. A few turns with a songbook and the words trip to your tongue, your fingers fly to the right notes on piano or guitar. You're all set to shine in such romantic airs as "Wailee Sweet Wailee:"

"The sun's gone to sleep,
The moon's shining mellow,
While stars blink and peep,
Night birds are singing
Sweet love songs of old."

And at the homespun humor of "Great Grand Dad," you'll surely chuckle:

"Great Grand Dad was a busy man;
Cooked his grub in a frying pan;
He picked his teeth with a hunting knife,
And wore the same suit all his life."

Softly, tenderly, you croon "The Dying Ranger," long a favorite of the plains:

"The sun was sinking in the West
And it fell with ling'ring ray
Through the branches of a forest
Where a wounded ranger lay;
'Neath the shade of a palmetto
And the sunset's silv'ry sky,
Far away from his home in Texas,
They laid him down to die."

Round up the crowd, sing these favorite Western songs in complete form! Our 50-page songbook gives 27 favorites—old and new. Has two-fisted cowboy songs, lovely Western ballads, love songs—complete with words music, piano accompaniments, guitar diagrams.

Send 15 cents in coins for our songbook, Western Heart Throbs, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of book.

Shun Short Skirts, Actress Advises Short Women

Knee length skirts are not for tall women despite fashion's edict, Gale Sondergaard protests. Tall herself, Gale won't wear them.

"Clothes that might make one woman a stunning creature, often turn another into a ridiculous appearing person, declared the movie actress.

"I'm too tall to wear short skirts and, fashion or no fashion, I shall not go to this extreme.

"The sooner a girl gets the notion of selecting the style of clothes best suited to her own type of figure, the sooner she'll find herself in the 'best dressed' class.

"Tall women should eschew short skirts, small women ought to avoid gowns that are extreme in length, and fat women should shun anything with horizontal stripes."

No Let-up in Sight in Party Whirl; Vandenbergs to Be Feted Today

William P. MacCrackens Will Be Hosts At Their Home to Senator and Wife On Twenty-First Wedding Anniversary

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

WHILE WASHINGTON in general has that school's-out feeling and Capitalites are departing in droves for mountain and beach resorts, those remaining on in town find a let-up in the partying whirl is not yet in the cards.

Come summer, winter, or sinus trouble, there's always an excuse for entertaining around these parts, and while more formal functions are bowing out of the picture, the social pace still continues full speed ahead.

Time was, when by mid-June Washington residents could look forward to a nice, long breathing spell, but this season the calendar is crowded as it has never been before, and a sizable number of the parties are four-star events from more than one angle.

ON THIS AFTERNOON'S schedule, for example, is a fete that will be of interest not only to Washington but to the country at large. Planned in honor of an outstanding Presidential possibility, Senator Vandenberg, and his popular wife, it will celebrate their twenty-first wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken will be hosts at the party, which will take place from 5 to 7 o'clock, and which originally was planned as a very small get-together, but has asumed much larger proportions by now. Weather permitting—and there's a good chance it will—the event will be held in the garden of the MacCracken's Benton place home.

BUT WHETHER it gets under way indoors or out, it will be an Important Party. Perhaps, over the mint juleps, Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg may fall to reminiscing about their wedding day, a red letter event back in Detroit in 1918.

Then a copy-writer for an advertising agency, Miss Hazel Whitaker (now Mrs. Vandenberg) worked up until 4 o'clock; then dressed and was at the preacher's house to be married by 4:30! Shortly after the ceremony, the newspaper editor and publisher and his wife left for a honeymoon trip that included Atlantic City, New York and Chicago. Ten years later he came to the Senate.

SPEAKING OF Presidential possibilities—as who isn't these days—more than one was mentioned in table talk yesterday when Mrs. Louis Caldwell entertained at a buffet luncheon in her home on Cleveland avenue.

A genius at getting together a congenial group in less time than it takes the average hostess to think about it, Mrs. Caldwell invited in a score of women yesterday for "a very informal luncheon—nothing really—just having in a few friends who will be going away soon, and a few others who might want to say good-by."

It was informal, delightfully so. Quartet tables, covered with pastel satin cloths, were set up in the spacious drawing room, and guests found places there after serving themselves piping hot cheese souffle, shrimp salad, stuffed olives and rye bread, spread with some delicious concoction. Later, there was ice cream, covered with berries, and angel cake.

AT LUNCHEON parties a week ago, you heard nothing but talk of Great Britain's King and Queen, but they were completely forgotten yesterday as speculation on the 1940 campaign went the rounds.

Deep in conversation were Mrs. Henry F. Grady, a vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Mrs. Samuel Connor, Democratic national committeewoman from Kentucky. At a table nearby, Mrs. Franklyn Waltman, wife of the publicity director of the National Republican Committee, listened intently as such names as Vandenberg, Garner, Bricker, Hull, Dewey and Taft were bandied about in a group that included Mrs. Thad Brown, Mrs. Jay Hayden and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, who will leave tonight for New York to attend the two-day Democratic regional conference at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Alfred Lafayette Ridings, of Sherman, Tex., and Mrs. Basil Manly were among those listening in and adding more than a word now and then as one political figure after another was discussed, and guests lingered to enjoy the party as long as possible.

OTHERS THERE included Frau Blankenhorn, of the German Embassy, who has no plans for the summer "only to stay right here;" Mrs. Edward Wilber, Mrs. Abner Drury, who will leave soon for an extended vacation trip to Mexico; Mrs. Bulkley Griffin; Mrs. Henry Berliner, who will be off this month for Rehoboth Beach to spend the summer; Mrs. Martin Codel, Mrs. George Sanford Holmes and Mrs. I. B. Kirkland.

Also on yesterday's calendar was the final meeting this season of the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club. That ancient and honorable institution, which has been meeting weekly each year from the first Tuesday in January until June, had a successful climax for 1939 when Mrs. Vandenberg headed yesterday's committee for a picnic luncheon.

SERVED AS USUAL in the Senate Office Building, where Senate wives meet, sew for the Red Cross, and then eat at the same festive board, the menu included fried chicken, sandwiches, olives, pickles and cup cakes that came out of authentic picnic boxes.

On the committee with Mrs. Vandenberg were Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. James H. Hughes, Mrs. Harry Schwartz, Mrs. Elmer Thomas, Mrs. Thomas Schall and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys.

Mrs. John Nance Garner, president of the club, presided at the meeting, and Mrs. Prew Savoy, daughter of Senator Townsend, of Delaware, issued an invitation to the members for a party at Rehoboth Beach on June 28.

Mme. Pelenyi Hostess at Tea

Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister, entertained yesterday at another in the series of teas which she has been giving this spring at the attractive legation on Albemarle street. The party was scheduled for the beautiful garden surrounding the Tudor residence, but Mme. Pelenyi wasn't as lucky in her weather as she was at the party held there last week, and it had to take place inside.

The hostess received at the entrance to the large drawing room, wearing a floor-length frock of maroon and white daisies splashed on a background of vivid blue. The house was decorated with all kinds of spring flowers in many different shades. The tea table was centered with larkspur and vases of lavender and white stock, dark-centered daisies and other blossoms were placed here and there in the hall and dining room.

Assisting during the afternoon were Mrs. Eugene Roberts, who is a daughter of the late Count Szechenyi, one-time Hungarian Minister here, and Countess Szechenyi; Mrs. Emory Land, wife of the chairman of the Maritime Commission; Mrs. Chester Bolton, Miss Katherine Andrews, Mrs. Edward McCormack, Mrs. George Brown, of Alexandria, and Mrs. Austin Chinn. Mrs. Chinn comes from Cleveland, home town of Mme. Pelenyi, and was guest of honor at a large reception given by the Minister and his wife last winter.

The Envoy and Mme. Pelenyi leave on Friday for New York and will sail the next day on the Conte de Savoia for a brief stay in Hungary. They will return in August and expect to spend the rest of their vacation in this country.

This afternoon Mme. Pelenyi will entertain at another tea for some of her Hungarian friends in Washington.

Senora de Martins Hostess at Tea At Brazilian Embassy for Niece

THE GARDEN of the Brazilian Embassy was admired yesterday through sheets of rain as guests huddled on the porch instead of wandering about on the grass, as originally planned by Senora de Martins, the Ambassador's wife, when she decided to give a tea. It couldn't have been a worse afternoon for an outdoor affair, but the party was loads of fun and lasted until almost 8 o'clock.

Guest of honor was Senorita Vera Cunha, the niece of the Ambassador and Senora de Martins, who was celebrating her eighteenth birthday. There were loads of young people present, and there was dancing in the front hall, the Ambassador having just received a huge batch of new records from Brazil—tangos, rhumbas, etc.

THE GARDEN, what could be seen of it, is charming—small, with clipped hedges surrounding neat flower beds, and the whole inside a brick wall. In the middle a glass table had been set up, centered with a vase of white flowers, which took rather a beating in the rain.

The hospitable Ambassadress received in the big dining room upstairs, with its handsome Japanese prints on the walls. She wore a printed crepe dress, floor length, with red and blue predominating on a white background, and a cluster of white carnations in her black hair. The Ambassador mingled about seeing that everybody got enough to eat and drink.

Her niece was to have been guest of honor with Miss Peggy Lansdowne, at a dinner given last Saturday by the latter's mother, Mrs. John Caswell, and the Ambassadress, but Senora de Martins remembered that she had an official dinner on that night—hence yesterday's tea instead.

LATIN AMERICANS always have more lavish food at their parties than anybody else, and yesterday was no exception. The dining room table was piled high with sandwiches of all kinds, ice cream and cakes, and there were Scotch and sodas and a special punch, a creation of the Ambassador. Great bowls of peonies were placed on the landing of the upper hall.

On the covered porch, overlooking the garden, sat a congenial group which included Mrs. Harold Hinton, chatting with Robert Buell; Miss Marion Trumbull, in a black and white print, sitting between George Duca and Baroness Baeyens, who wore a flowered dress.

James Mitchell was telling friends he will be off the end of the month for Bar Harbor, with his trailer full of antiques from his shop following behind. He has a summer store at the Maine resort. Mrs. John Caswell was also discussing summer plans—she will set forth July 14 for Prides Crossing, Mass., where she has been loaned a house for the summer. Mrs. Caswell was chic as usual in a gray silk dress, high-crowned bright red straw hat and PAULO HASSLOCHER, commercial counselor of the embassy, will leave by motor July 15 for California. Keith Officer and Angus Malcolm, of the British Embassy, were other diplomats present at the party. The other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, the Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen—the latter is considering a few weeks in Newport this summer, and perhaps a stay at Rehoboth; Miss Stellita Stapleton, in a white crepe dress with a colored belt and a white hat trimmed with a veil; and a few others.

A FRIEND who accompanied the King and Queen to New York tells us that at the luncheon in their honor at the World's Fair one gentleman who followed his wife down the line was so excited that he curtsied. Some of the wives of fair officials present wore the "World's Fair" hat, an orange and blue number surmounted by a trylon and perisphere. This gave a strange fancy dress atmosphere to the proceedings.

MORE SUMMER PLANS: Mrs. Higginson Rogers will spend the warm months at Gibson Island, and while she is away her house in Georgetown will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Horace Peters . . . Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin sail July 14 to visit Capt. and Mrs. Alan Kirk in London. Capt. Kirk is Naval Attache of the United States Embassy there and his wife is Mr. Chapin's sister. Mrs. Chapin will go to Maine July 4 for a vacation before sailing.

Edges Go to Maine; Will Sail in July

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edge have left for their summer home at Small Point, Me., to spend several weeks.

Late in July they will sail with their children for a cruise aboard the S. S. Gripsholm to Sweden, Norway and Denmark. Mr. Edge will go to Scotland for some shooting before returning to this country.

Logan Tells Class To Consolidate Law On New Theories

Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, last night urged National University Law School graduates to "consolidate" established law concepts on the "foundation" of newer legal theories in commencement exercises at Memorial Continental Hall.

"We need young men and women lawyers with broad points of view . . . yet the older fundamentals" still hold good, Logan, the former chief justice of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, asserted.

Stressing the importance of practical legal training, Logan said "lawyers must be practical and, while theory will suffice to make an argument or maintain a position . . . yet it is of great importance to be taught by men who have had actual experience in the practice of law."

"Equal Justice"

Franklin H. Benecke, the class valedictorian, declared the "obligation of the law is to maintain the promise of equal justice to all" to perpetuate democracy.

Chancellor Leslie C. Garnett, presiding at the exercises, conferred an honorary degree of doctor of laws on Senator Logan and the following graduates of the university: George P. Barse, general counsel to the Controller of the Currency; William B. Kerkham, president of the American Patent Law Association, and John Clagett Proctor, historian.

Degrees Conferred

The degree of doctor of juridical science was conferred on Jose M. Aruego, Bibiano Vinoya Bitanga, Paul Joseph Bush, L. Valido Dagdagan, Ernest N. Hudgins, William Cabiness Martin, jr., Pompei Leonard Orlando and Virginius Faison Williams.

Recipients of the degree of doctor of jurisprudence were William Eugene Allen, Prentiss Ward Evans, Bunyan Henry Lord, jr., Samuel William Hubbard Meloy and Wilbur Rogers.

Winners of special prizes, presented by Associate Justice Jennings Bailey of the United States District Court, were Donald A. Pollack, university gold medal; Jack Goldberg, MacArthur gold medal; Ruth M. Jaeger, Hurst gold medal; Ethel Norene McDermott, Eugene Carusi gold medal, and Fu An, a graduate of the Great China University, the Charles F. Carusi prize for outstanding scholarship in the school of economics and government.

Among those on whom bachelor of laws degrees were conferred are two couples who married while studying law at the university. They are Mr. and Mrs. Gordon William Crozier, of 2945 Connecticut avenue northwest, and Mr. and Mrs. Fordyce Ward Kennedy, 1301 Vermont avenue northwest.

Capital News In Brief

Mildred Grounded

The storm last night grounded "Mildred."

Mildred was scheduled to soar away to Hazelton, Pa., with half a hundred other fliers, when the thunderstorm struck the Capital. So Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who was scheduled to launch Mildred on her flight, wired the chamber of commerce of Hazelton:

"Mildred arrived in midst of big storm. She is spending the night with me and will be released in the morning."

Mildred was one of more than 50 carrier pigeons, sent by Hazelton pigeon fanciers to members of the Senate, to be released for a race back home. Most of the others were released for their return flight, but Pittman decided the storm was too severe to release Mildred.

Roosevelt Encourages U. S. Rabbis

Message Read as Leaders Urge More Study of 'Isms' by Congressional Group

President Roosevelt last night sent words of encouragement to 200 reform rabbis, meeting here after the cruelest year in Judaism's modern history, promising them that "the United States stands ready at all times to renew its faith in the principles of complete liberty of conscience."

The annual convention at the Mayflower Hotel of the Central Conference of Rabbis—"the leaders of a stricken people"—heard a Presidential message declaring:

"This principle is embodied in our Constitution and has been ingrained in our very being from our beginnings as a nation. We Americans could tolerate no way of life which attempted to curtail liberty of thought, of conscience, of the press, or complete freedom in education.

"Ism" Inquiry Praised

"In a message to the Congress last January I took occasion to declare that: 'Where freedom of religion has been attacked, the attack has come from sources opposed to democracy. Where democracy has been overthrown, the spirit of free worship has disappeared. And where religion and democracy have vanished, good faith and reason in international affairs have given way to strident ambition and brute force.'"

The President noted his interest in the conference theme of "Judaism and democracy with emphasis on the need for religious motivation in democracy for America and the world."

He expressed his hope that the conference deliberations "will be fruitful of wise counsel and constructive action in the defense of the heritage of democracy on which all our happiness rests."

Rabbi Max C. Currick, of Erie, Pa., conference president, opened the five-day session with a demand that Congress continue "without fear or favor and without regard of any political considerations, its investigation of subversive movements in the country."

Sees Menace to U. S.

He urged that Congress discover and curb "the political adventurers who would establish in our beloved country the political forms and un-American methods of the Fascist, the Nazi or Communist governments of the Old World."

He said the United States was menaced by the world-wide anti-religious and anti-democratic struggles, and that "foreign protagonists of racialism and power have their agents and allies among us." They challenge, he declared, "all that America has stood for in the world, all that Christianity and Judaism have endeavored to realize in life."

With words of bitter disappointment, Rabbi Currick denounced the British White Paper as a "cruel and faithless solution of the Palestine problem." It will bring "no settlement nor peace to Palestine or elsewhere."

Asks Protest to Britain

He recommended that a protest be registered through the Department of State to the British government and that a plea be made "that our support in case of war. The Jews, it is assumed, must be quiescent and supporting in any event."

Dr. Currick and other speakers paid warm tribute to the late Dr. Abram Simon, for many years leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Speakers today will include Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland, who will discuss "The World Crisis and Jewish Survival," at 3:30 p. m., and Dr. Samuel E. Goldenson, of New York City, speaking on "The Jew, Champion of the Ideals of Democracy," at 8 p. m. All sessions are at the Mayflower Hotel.

Boys Club Cuts Registration Age Limit to 6 Years

A lucky break for the 6-year-old takes place today when the Southeast Branch of the Washington Boys Club, at Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast, for the first time opens its membership to 6-year "midgets."

Hitherto, the registration age has been 7. All four branches of the club are now reducing the minimum by one year.

A specially graded summer program has been developed for the "midgets" up to 9 years.

More than 400 older boys will take in two-week vacations at Camp Reeder, operated by the club at Mount Victoria, Md., beginning July 3.

Four Students Given Watches for Essays

Four Washington High School students were presented with watches yesterday by the Gruen Watch Co. for writing the best essay on "Why I am proud to be an American." One winner from each school was selected out of 600 contestants.

Winners were John E. Lamb, Eastern High School; Bernard J. Alpher, Central; Margaret E. Nichols, Western, and Eileen Paxton, Wilson High School. The watches were presented by Arthur J. Sundlun, president of A. Kahn, Inc.

Wise Assails Chamberlain Before 600

Balfour Declaration Can Be Ignored but Not Canceled, He Says

The Balfour declaration, guaranteeing a Jewish homeland in Palestine, "can be ignored by the British government, but 1,000 Chamberlains can never cancel it," Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress, declared last night.

An audience of 600, assembled in the Jewish Community Center under the auspices of the Washington branch of the American Jewish Congress, repeatedly applauded Rabbi Wise's bitter denunciation of the Chamberlain cabinet.

A leading delegate to the recent London conference on Palestine, Rabbi Wise, charged that Jewry had been "deliberately led into a trap by Malcolm MacDonald (Dominions secretary), of whom the best that can be said is that executed unworthy orders as if he believed in them."

Wouldn't Trade Roosevelt

"I would like to substitute Franklin Roosevelt for Chamberlain for one week," he said, "but I wouldn't give him to them for a week if we had to take Chamberlain in exchange."

MacDonald's Parliamentary defense of the White Paper on Palestine was "obviously insincere and pitiably dishonest," he asserted, while expressing warm gratitude to such opposition leaders as David Lloyd George, Winston Churchill, Col. Josiah Wedgewood and Sir Archibald Sinclair.

Turning to the domestic scene, the Jewish spokesman characterized the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin as "Enemy No. 1—not of the Jews, but of American democracy."

The radio priest, he said, "has one plain aim, though he hasn't the guts to put it in so many words, and that is to destroy American democracy and establish a Hitler dictatorship. He is resorting to the same Hitler tactics that he knows to be a foul and damnable lie—claiming that Jews are Communists, that Jews are war-mongers."

Holds Nazis Not Germany

Five-sixths of the country's Catholics are opposed to Coughlin, he estimated. "I would rather be attacked by him," Rabbi Wise added, "than get an LL. D. from Harvard."

Rabbi Wise asked his listeners "to follow my own rule—never speak of Hitler's Reich as Germany—that was the land of Goethe, Schilling, Bach, Beethoven and Haydn. That was Germany, and once more shall be Germany when the gangsters are gone."

He expressed disappointment that Cuba, "the country we liberated, should have shown such inhumanity to refugees pleading for shelter"—the passengers of the liner St. Louis—but pointed out "our quarrel is with the Nazi government from which our people flee."

Milk Committee May Get Draft of Legislation Today

The first draft of a bill to create a District milk commission may be submitted today to the District subcommittee investigating the local milk market, it was learned yesterday.

Blond Evangelist of 13 Conducts Revival for Youth

Dozen Fall on Knees as Schoolgirl Finishes Exhortation From Pulpit Behind Which She Was Barely Visible

Her shoulders draped with blonde curls, an attractive child evangelist stood before a Calvary Gospel Church young people's congregation last night to advise that "it takes more than church attendance or membership to be really 'saved.'"

"You may have your name on all the church rolls, you may be a member of the largest church in the city, but that will not save you from your sins," 13-year-old Beatrice Wells, of West Virginia, cried from a tall pulpit behind which she was barely visible.

"Quoting from the Scriptural story of Paul and Silas, she asked them to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved . . . and thy house," and assured that "after we have really given ourselves to Him, we shall not want to quarrel with our neighbors, our schoolmates. We need to be 'born again,' and then the old desires, the old pleasures—dancing, card playing, dancing—will pass away."

Prior to her message, Beatrice raised her voice in " . . . When the harvest days are over by and by . . . I have volunteered to step into His work . . . Though I'm young and small and tender . . . yet to Him my whole life render . . . for the cause that many strong and great have shirked. . . "

After she had spoken, the child, a recent graduate of the Blacksville (W. Va.) elementary school, stepped down from the platform to ask the members to "come to Jesus," and among the dozen who fell on their knees before the rail were several girls of her own age.

"In the wild rush of today, people need something more than material things to satisfy them," she commented. She speaks every day at 7:30 p. m., with the exception of Saturdays, at the Calvary Church. Her father is a West Virginia clergyman, and her brother also is studying for the ministry. She and her mother are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kothe, 3629 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Navy Asks $23,466,000 For Buildings

For Department And Museum on Constitution Ave. and Berths for Ships

Congress was asked yesterday to authorize construction of a new group of buildings to house the Navy Department, complete with a naval museum and berthings for several historical ships.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury sent a bill to Speaker Bankhead asking expenditures of $23,466,000 for the whole project, to be built in units over a period of years. One large building facing on Constitution avenue between the Naval Hospital and the Potomac River will house the department proper, it is planned, while in a separate structure, racing the river, the Navy will collect its many relics into a museum.

Funds are included to berth a number of famous warships in the river by the Titanic Memorial. The Hartford and Olympia, Farragut's and Dewey's flagships, and perhaps the Constitution and its sister ship, the Constellation, would be brought here under plans drawn up by President Roosevelt.

Much of the land for the buildings is now owned by the Government, but Heurich's Brewery and other buildings would be razed for the project, and Potomac drive would be relocated.

Ruhland Backed On Housing Survey

The Commissioners yesterday gave their approval to Health Officer George C. Ruhland to direct the proposed housing survey with the stipulation no District funds be expended.

The survey will provide employment for 462 workers over an eight-month period.

Thirty thousand dollars to take care of the supervisory charges were granted by the United States Housing Administration.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'It's a Wonderful World,' My Masters—and How!

New M-G-M Frolic Ideal for 'Silly Season;' Jascha Heifetz Sound Track Is Now a Feature; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THIS IS THE TIME OF YEAR that is colloquially known as the "silly season." Light, gay and effervescent entertainment is supposed to be what the doctor ordered—just to keep your mind off the heat and other worries, if any. So Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer decided to fill the prescription.

BELL

Their concoction, known by the title of "It's a Wonderful World," was unspooled for the drama desks yesterday afternoon in the private bandbox theater in the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange. It will open on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday and is quite as goofy as the season it was designed to celebrate. In fact, it took some of the best minds on the M-G-M lot to make it as utterly lunatic as it is.

Ben Hecht wrote the scenario from a story thought up by him and Herman J. Mankiewicz; Woody S. Van Dyke directed and Claudette Colbert and James Stewart costar at the head of a cast that includes, among others, Guy Kibbee, Nat Pendleton, Frances Drake, Edgar Kennedy, Ernest Truex, Richard Carle, Sidney Blackmer, Andy Clyde, Cecil Cunningham and Grady Sutton. I submit that that is a flock of "names" to be identified with any single picture—particularly if it drops into the "B" slot.

It is a romantic detective yarn that we have here, with romantic trimmings and comic embellishments that only occasionally fail to jell. The story is involved and no end tricky—all about a New York sousepot, just married for the fourth time, who stands a fine chance of being hijacked out of his $10,000,000 fortune by a scheming bride and her crooked consort. A murder that easily can be pinned on Willie Heyward seems the easiest way to get all that dough, with the electric chair as final arbiter in the case. The murder comes off as scheduled, the gun is found in Willie's drunken hand and it looks pretty tough for him. Then Guy Johnson and "Cap" Streeter, private detectives, enter the case and, boy, does it get gummed up! The Messrs. Johnson and Streeter would be James Stewart and Guy Kibbee.

Claudette Colbert gets into the picture by devices that are distinctly spurious, but once she is in it, I mean to say she "goes to town," after the usual manner of a brilliant young poetess, who decides to become a detective, instead, to serve as a major handicap to the bothered Mr. Johnson. These two don't make sense, but it must be said that they manufacture a tremendous celluloid voltage, some of which is grounded but most of which generates the laughter it was intended to set off.

So what? So it all just goes to show; goes to show that the master minds of Hollywood, when this season of the year rolls around, can be just as daffy as the rest of us—maybe daffier.

Sam Goldwyn is another one who doesn't let grass grow under his feet, as the saying goes. When he thinks he has something worth "selling," he begins his campaign so far in advance that contemplating the picture involved is something like looking through the wrong end of a telescope. In this case, it is "Music School," the production for which Jascha Heifetz, as star, made all of his violin recordings before the story of the piece ever was conceived, let alone written. Miss Evelyn Gerstein, representing the Goldwyn studios, drops by the desk to clarify matters a little with regard to this more or less enigmatic subject. It seems that finally a pretty swell story has been cooked up—all about a music school, conducted by Walter Brennan, the organization of a juvenile symphony orchestra, with Heifetz's aid, etc. Joel McCrea and Andrea Leeds are cast in the romantic roles and no end of juvenile prodigies are said to be unearthed during the progress of the film. Instead of merely playing his fiddle, Heiftez was called back to the studio and given a part in the story. "Music School" will not be along to a Loew screen for six to eight weeks yet, but that is the way they can build a picture around a sound track, in case anybody cares. There will be more about this unique production later, both you and I are afraid.

Thursday of this week will mark the fiftieth anniversary of the first performance of "The Washington Post March," by the late John Phillip Sousa and his band. Sousa composed this quickstep a half century ago in honor of The Washington Post and a special event it was celebrating at that time. It has endured ever since as one of the "March King's" most popular works.

In honor of the number's golden jubilee, it will be played on Thursday night by both the Capitol and Earle Theater orchestras, under the conductorships, respectively, of Phil Lampkin and Jo Lombardi. You may already know the tune, but that doesn't matter. It is one that never wears out.

By reason of the fact that "Pagliacci," stripped to its operatic narrative and music, turns out to be a film of shorter running time than usual, "Storm in a Teacup" —the film version of the stage comedy, "Storm Over Patsy"—has been added to the bill opening this morning at the Little Theater. The management points out that this double-feature program, with the usual supplementaries, will comprise a bargain entertainment consuming two and a half hours. Bargain is right.

Preceding the preview screening of "It's a Wonderful World" yesterday afternoon, one of John Nesbitt's "Passing Parade" short subjects was run off. It bears the title of "Angel of Mercy" and deals with the late Clara Barton's fight for the establishment of the Red Cross in this country and the right of women to perform merciful service on the battlefields. It is a well-documented subject that tells a long story in a brief space.

But I wonder how many theatergoers remember that Clara Barton spent the last years of her life as a resident of Glen Echo, Md.? Many notables wore a path to her door. I am proud of an autographed photograph of Clara Barton that hangs on my wall. It was given to me by the "Angel of Mercy" many years ago and has been treasured ever since. Needless to say, I found added interest in Mr. Nesbitt's film—in which, by the way, Sara Haden bears a striking resemblance to the noble woman she impersonates.

And I exhort you to get seats for the Roadside while there are still some left. "The Pioneer's Daughter" is a sure-fire sellout, once it gets around what a high-power whiz-bang it really is. You'll die.

". . . and your sister, Shirley, phoned to say that she's going on a spree . . . Well, you know that she goes to the neighborhood movie every week to collect a set of dishes . . . She said tomorrow she's going on a spree, by going to a theater where they have only movies—no giveaways."

11 P. M.: "Hello, Warden," Richard Maney, at the Tavern, greets Warden Lawes, whose "fight" with him was recorded in the newspapers—although Maney still has no recollections about it—"I haven't seen you since we met on Page One" . . . "I just saw Elliott Roosevelt," a ringsider reports at the Cotton Club. "He said that during the White House dinner for their Majesties he and F. D. Jr. strolled outside, on the terrace, to get away from the crowd and cool off. Along came the King—alone and unprotected. Up at Hyde Park, said Elliott, King George seemed a little groggy from all the receptions, but the President told him to take it easy, and shooed all people away from him." . . .

12 P. M.: "Groucho and Chico Marx get $2,500 a week each from their radio broadcasts," an agent states at Moore's, "and insisted that Harpo get one-third of that, Harpo refused, but they convinced him to take some of that dough." "Anita Loos gave a party in honor of her maid's new baby," a film producer reports at Fefe's Monte Carlo. "The guests were shocked when the baby suddenly started to talk and asked Aldous Huxley for a glass of beer, Huxley finally exposed the culprit—Edgar Bergen, who was doing a ventriloquist routine"

1 A. "I just made a television broadcast," Burgess Meredith declares at Tony's. "It was all impromptu, and very good, too" . . . The only time an impromptu program is good," Kent Smith tells him, "is when you're on it" . . .

2 A. M.: "When Margaret Sullavan visited us," Mrs. Roark Bradford confides at Sardi's, "she saw our young son, Richard, and said that if she ever has a daughter she'll marry him to Richard. Margaret now has two daughters, Brooke and Bridget. Last week I heard Richard repeating their names, then he told me: 'I won't marry Brooke. I want Bridget—because Bridget Bradford sounds nicer' " . . . "I'm glad people have forgotten my fight with Theodore Dreiser," Sinclair Lewis confessed. "They've forgotten which one of us got slapped."

3 A. M.: "How good a shortstop are you?" Adelaide Moffett asks Leo Durocher at the Stork . . . "Well," is his modest reply, "just fair" . . . "Yeah," Miss Moffett returns. "That's what Gabby Hartnett told me" . . . "Heckler," Durocher quizzes, "three on base, the batter hits a homer, but not a man scores. How come? Give up? It was a girls' team." "Strange," Ralph Holmes tells his bride, Libby Holman, at El Morocco, "that I, a Dramatic actor, am rehearsing in 'Yokel Boy,' a musical comedy, while you, a musical comedy star, are rehearsing a Dramatic job in the play, 'Burlesque' " . . . "I resent that, dear, Mrs. Holmes replies . . . "I'm plenty Dramatic" . . .

"I left Brenda Frazier a few minutes ago," a socialite reveals at the Versailles. "She said that that when she's 20, until the next year when she'll come into her inheritance, she'll retire to Nebraska" . . . "Yes, Saturday was a black day for the Levants," Oscar Levant laments at Lindy's. " 'The American Way' closed and I lost my job as orchestra conductor there. My brother Harry lost his job the same day as conductor at 'The Boys From Syracuse.' Also, the Giants beat Pittsburgh" . . .

5 A. M.: "The broadcast of the King and Queen's arrival got mixed up with the broadcast of the night ball game," George Jessel states at Reuben's. "On my radio it sounded like the King was on second base and then the Queen hit a foul" . . . "This may come out at the Bill Buckner trial," a detective reports at Dave's. "When some Federal men went to see Loretta Young, while she was working in Hollywood, they asked permission to watch her on the set. Loretta agreed, but then had cameramen photograph these men—and recorded all their antics on the lot."

6 A. M.: ". . . . and it's about time we decide where to go this summer . . . You still haven't told me what you think of going to Luxor . . . What, dear? . . . It sounds ideal? . . . No, no—I mean Luxor, that place in Egypt. I didn't mean Luxor Baths."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 13 (INS).—Had a private look at the still pictures made of Hedy Lamarr and Robert Taylor in "Lady of the Tropics" and they are reminiscent of "The Sheik" and the days before love was censored. A disinterested person tells me the scenes between Bob and Hedy are the hottest romantic sequences seen since Garbo and Jack Gilbert burned up the films and Vilma Banky and Ronald Coleman represented young love.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Hedy finishes this week and, with barely three weeks rest, goes into "The Ziegfeld Girl," as the chief exponent of glamour. There will be another blonde to offest Hedy's raven locks, with Margaret Sullavan playing the dramatic lead. Mervyn Leroy, "Wizard of Oz" has M. G. M. talking enthusiastically, is lining up the other members of the cast.

Very quietly, without fanfare or publicity, Dorothy Thompson, who is said to wield more influence on the feminine mind and of many men, too, than any other American woman with the exception of Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, has arrived in Hollywood. She'll be here a month, and while here, it is entirely possible she will do something for the movies. Walter Wanger, who has great admiration for her ability as a thinker, a writer and a molder of public opinion, has had several conferences with her. He is trying to persuade her to write a story for him that will be more than just the usual movie entertainment. Here is hoping she accepts Walter's offer.

The "Dead End" kids have outgrown their Warner Brothers contract—and for that reason they are not being renewed. I thought at first, when I heard the news, that it might be because the Hays office received so many letters from parents protesting that the boys' antics have had a deleterious effect on the youth of the country. But Warners deny that, saying it is too difficult to get material for young men who hardly fit the description "kids" any more. However, they plan to go on a personal appearance tour for the next six weeks—all but Billy Halop, who will remain here and try his luck as an independent actor. The rest, Huntz Hall, Bobby Jordon, Leo (Bridegroom) Gorcey, Gabriel Dell and Bernard Punsley will meet their public face to face.

The last letter I received from Peggy Wood was just after she had brought out a volume of poems by her late husband, John V. A. Weaver. She was in London in a Noel Coward musical and she said nothing about returning to America. So I was surprised today when I heard that she had accepted Hal Roach's offer to play Joan Bennett's mother in "The Housekeeper's Daughter," the Donald Henderson Clark novel. Peggy will play opposite Adolphe Menjou in a handpicked cast. She is now in New York and will reach here almost any day for her Roach assignment—I reckon it's Olga Swanson, the housekeeper herself. I have to admit I didn't read the book.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: June Lang went with Brian Aherne to Natalie Draper Brown's cocktail party, but it was Natalie with whom he went stepping the next night; a radiant Madge Evans at the Paul Draper-Eric Templeton opening with her fiance Sidney Kingsley. She wore Kingsley's ring, a huge diamond, and everyone in Una Merkel's party at the Cocoanut Grove commented on how happy Madge looks; Clyde Lucas, the Grove orchestra leader, had a busy time trying to get a copy of the Nicaragua national anthem when President Samoza and a party of 22 walked in unannounced; Dorothy Lamour sat at a ringside table with John Howard and applauded Draper vociferously. Dot heads for Waukegan with the Jack Bennys to attend the premier of "Man About Town;" Eddie Albert is buying flowers for Jean Tierney this week and Tom Brown is consoling Jane Bryan at the La Conga; Bob Burns took a ride in the ambulance with his wife and baby—home from the hospital.

Gwynne Pickford is waiting for a line from her Aunt Mary, who is still hurt at her niece's elopment; Irving Berlin planed in today to go to work on "Say It With Music;" Gloria Swanson denies there is a serious thought between her and Herschel Williams.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Experience on Stage Needed For Film Work

Sensational overnight screen success is all right in its way, but there is no substitute for stage training, one Hollywood director declared recently.

The spokesman was Kurt Neumann, veteran film mentor, whose current assignment is "Unmarried."

"No one likes to see newcomers get the breaks any more than I," Neumann commented on the set, "but I thank heaven there are at least four plays in my relatively small cast who have years of good hard stage work behind them.

"It was Helen Twelvetrees' great success in 'An American Tragedy' and later in 'Roulette' on Broadway that brought her to the attention of film scouts.

"Sidney Blackmer, who plays the heavy in 'Unmarried,' has fully 50 Broadway successes to his credit as well as a sound schooling in Shakespeare and repertory.

"Robert Armstrong, who portrays the role of Pins Streaver, fight manager, first won his spurs on Broadway before turning to films as a medium. It was his outstanding work as the palooka fighter in 'Is Zat So?' with James Gleason, that resulted in his recognition by Hollywood."

Others in the cast of the picture that benefited materially from hard years in stock and Broadway are Donald O'Connor, child prodigy, and John Hartley, youthful newcomer.

Buck Jones, featured with Miss Twelvetrees, got his intensive training before paying audiences in wild west shows, circuses and more than 700 outdoor action pictures. This is Jones' first picture not in the Western manner. In it he portrays a fourth-rate fighter who finally abandons the fight game.

Hilton Seeks First Edition of 'Chips'

James Hilton, who wrote "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," in four days and never thought much would come of it, is in the market for a first English edition of his now famous novel, which has sold approximately 1,000,000 copies and been filmed with Robert Donat and Greer Garson.

Hilton has many souvenirs of "Mr. Chips," including the first script of the film version, but no first English edition, which is a great rarity and a prized collector's item. Hilton admits that he never suspected a first English edition of "Mr. Chips" would ever have any great value and casually gave away to friends the six copies presented to him by the publisher. Now he would like to have one for himself.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 13.—Here in Hollywood when people graduate from one phase of the business to another the tendency has been to go slightly top-hat with the ascension. Now that Gene Towne and Graham Baker have become producers and moved into their conservative offices at R. K. O., their walls are lined with pictures of their writer pals, with "vice president" written under each. I asked what they were going to do.

HOPPER

"Well, we're going to give a party for the producers, actors, writers and press, who have put us where we are today. Without their co-operation we never could have made the grade."

Just then a messenger boy came in asking for the prdoucer. "Why, Mr. Berman is in the front office," said Gene.

"Oh, no," said the messenger; "I want Producer Towne."

They've had hundreds of letters asking for "Swiss Family Robinson" which they'll do. Did you know that was the first book the quints ever received? Alexander Wollcott sent each a copy.

Ronald Colman's married gayety is so infectious his friends are urging him to do a picture with his wife. Naturally, they'd love it. Why not? Benita Hume's beautiful and a swell actress. She goes with him on location to Santa Fe in "The Light That Failed."

I wonder if these girls, not of the profession, like Mrs. Doug Fairbanks, Jr., realize when they marry, they wed their husband's work? And like a doctor's wife, most of their time is spent waiting.

Orson Welles is working his way West by the p. a. route. He'll make the movies yet.

Who says actors won't co-operate for the good of their own people? For the last Guild show, Ty Power, Roz Russell, George Murphy, Jean Hersholt, Dick Powell, Reggie Gardiner, Marie Wilson and Lionel Stander all did their stuff.

Hedy Lamarr got nervous over three women on her set and had it closed for the day.

Charlie Winninger really cried in "Babes in Arms" while doing a scene with Henry Hull. Hull cracked, and Charlie couldn't help but weep. And I'll be darned if he wasn't still crying when I left the set.

Alice Faye's seeing quite a lot of Artie Shaw, much to the distress of Judy Garland.

That cute dancer, Diane, may be the next Mrs. Bert Wheeler, now that Bert's divorce is final.

Swell gag Russell Birdwell pulled on Walter Wanger. While showing him through his swank new offices he introduced Wanger to his foreign staff. One looked like a prophet, another British diplomat, the third was a Frenchman who proceeded to tell Walter off in that language. All were mere extras hired for the day!

When Bob Taylor went on the Reno set in "The Women" to look at a mare he wanted to buy, George Cukor saw only his shadow. And yelled, "Get that guy off this set."

Bob looked up and said, 'It's only me, George."

"The crack still goes. Don't you know this is 'The Women'?"

He does now!

Albert Hay Malotte played a dozen of his new compositions at Frances Marion's the other night. Five of them will be done by Tibbett at his bowl concert this summer, and the rest by John Charles Thomas. Their gracious majesties heard Malotte's version of "The Lord's Prayer" at the White House this week.

Elsie Janis did some of the impersonations. They come and go, but she's still top to me.

Taylor Has Turn As Movie Hoofer

No to be outdone by Clark Gable in "Idiot's Delight," Robert Taylor danced in his first scene for "Lady of the Tropics." The dance was to illustrate to a native clerk who understands no English, that he wanted to purchase a temple dancer's headdress.

Chevy Chase Women Win Team Championship

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Out of the Mailbag

Dear Sir:

What are you trying to do, start another Civil War? . . . There's all kinds of evidence that Southerners are better ball players. W. James, Washington, D. C.

POVICH

Dear Sir:

. . . No, Mr. Povich, don't try to palm off the Washington club's poor showing on their Southern ball players' lack of zeal . . . Incidentally, you might keep tab on a young outfielder named Bud Metheny, who came up with Newark for a while after burning up the league with Norfolk last season. He is now playing for Kansas City, and I think a year or more of seasoning will find him knocking hard at the door leading to the Yankees' outfield. Frank Rafio, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va.

Dear Sir:

. . . I think you owe the Southern ball players an apology . . . Let me ask you, where is the best football played, and what does it take to win football games, more than the old moxie? You guessed it, I'm from the South and am calling your hand. Harold Pierce, ex-Tar Heel, Takoma Park, Md.

COMMENT—To Messrs. James, Rafio and Pierce, to all other Southerners who did and didn't pen replies to this department, our profoundest apologies, and a violent self-rebuke for permitting ourselves to be so affected by the St. Louis heat as to write that Southerners lacked zeal in baseball.

To James M. Shannon

Dear Sir:

Will you please give me a ruling on the following controversy? Mount Jackson playing at Woodstock, Va., score 6-6, last half of ninth inning. Woodstock filled the bases with none out. Next batter hit a ground ball between short and third, striking base runner from second before passing fielder. Umpire ruled that base runner was out but allowed the runner on third to score with the winning run. Mount Jackson protested that the umpire's ruling was in violation of section 12, rule 49.

The president of the league upheld the protest and ordered the game replayed. Should an entire new game be played or should it be started at the point where the wrong decision was made? James M. Shannon, Mount Jackson, Va.

COMMENT—The president of the league was justified in upholding the protest. Rule 49 reads explicitly that "if a fair hit ball strikes a base runner, no run shall be scored." The base runner is out, of course, and the batter becomes a base runner, with the runner on third holding his base. Whether or not the game shall be replayed or resumed from the point where the wrong decision was made, is not provided for in the official baseball rules. In the American League, it is the province of the league president to decide. In the past, the American League president has ordered games replayed from the point of a protested decision, and also replayed in their entirety. American League Umpire Bill McGowan is of the opinion that the game should be played off as of the ninth inning, with the bases full and one out.

Dear Sir:

Would you be kind enough to publish or forward the rules having to do with the signing of players who have no minor league experience, and if such a player must play with a minor league club before being eligible to play in the majors.

COMMENT—Until last December, both major leagues had agreements with the National Association of Minor Leagues to the effect that college or high school or sandlot players could not be signed to major league contracts unless they had played in the minor leagues. It was in effect for several years. Last December the rule was abrogated, with the permission of Commissioner Landis.

To Alonzo B. Cornell

Dear Sir:

Your article this morning on our Venezuelan friend, Alexandra, was extremely interesting. I have been watching this boy (?) since I came to Washington, for I have felt for some time that one of our big league clubs would eventually have a Venezuelan on its roster. Baseball, you see, has long been the national sport of that country, more popular than horse racing and golf, though most of us still think of those Latin American countries as reveling in the gore of bulls killed in the arena . . .

There is hardly a male, man or boy, native or Indian, who cannot quote batting averages and performances of most of the outstanding big leaguers.

For the past year I have been American director of the Venezuelan Grand National Fair, which will open in a few months . . . the head of the fair committee is one Alberto Winckelmann, as good a Venezuelan name as can be found, though it sounds Dutch. It was he who organized professional baseball in Venezuela, he was first president of the nine-team league. He recommended Alex to the Yankees on a trip to New York. He mentioned Alex's name several times to George Ruppert, although, of course, it was difficult then for anybody to believe that baseball players from South America could be so good.

In Caracas, from where Alex hails, they have a new baseball stadium seating 35,000 and there never is a ball game in Caracas without a capacity crowd and the prices would make you shudder. Bleacher seats sell at the equivalent of $2. Alonzo B. Cornell, 622 Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 13.—Baseball fans who pine for the "good old days" of the game will never see them again, Ty Cobb said today. The greatest record-maker in baseball history, making his first trip East in ten years, believes that the lively ball has changed the whole philosophy of the game, and that things are made so easy for rookies, these days, that the aggressive type of ball player is about extinct.

CONSIDINE

"It's a different kind of baseball they're playing now, from the one I used to play," the 52-year-old squire of Menlo Park, Calif., said, fingering a shiny black bat they had given him at Cooperstown, N. Y. "We used to play for one run. That was our whole aim, out there. And to get that run we'd steal bases, bunt the ball, try to out-think the other fellow, put on the squeeze play, hit-and-run and a dozen other tricks that have just about gone out of fashion.

"Our great idea was to get a man in scoring position, and that meant second base. Nowadays—with this ball—a man's in scoring position if he's on first base, because the next fellow at bat is likely to hit a long one.

Cobb Would Swing for Fence

"Mind you, I'm not squawking. If I were playing today I wouldn't be the same kind of player I was. I mean I wouldn't be stealing all those bases, and doing anything to get on base, or trying to punch a single through those infielders. I'd be out there like the rest of them—swinging for the fence.

"Mightn't do bad at that home run business, either," the blue-eyed man chuckled. "Don't forget I led the American League one year in home runs. Hit nine."

The players have it so soft now, compared to the rookies of Cobb's early days, that Ty wonders how they show as much pep as they do.

"When I came up from Augusta in August of '05 why some of those old fellows on the Detroit club wouldn't even let me take my batting practice," Cobb snorted. "They wouldn't do anything to help a young fellow. They wanted to protect their jobs. So I had to fight for everything I got. One of the worst fights I ever had was against that fellow Schmidt on our own team. I guess it made us tougher, knowing that we had to make it on our own. But nowadays the teams almost pamper the kids with instructions and help. No wonder they aren't as tough—though I've got to say that mechanically they're as good as any of us ever were."

Still Sore at Mays and Leonard

Cobb had dozens of fights during his 20 years in harness, but he still feels incensed at only two of his old time foes. They are Carl Mays and Dutch Leonard. They used to "dust him off" at the plate. "And I got back at them the only way I could," the vigorous, healthy veteran mused. "Wasn't no sense throwing a bat at them, so I'd drag a bunt down the first base line. They'd have to field it, and then I'd pile into them.

"But outside of that I don't think I ever deliberately cut a fellow, except to protect myself. My idea in going into a base wasn't to hit a fellow. I wanted to duck him, so he wouldn't put that ball on me. I got spiked more than I spiked. Take a look at these," and he pulled up his gray trousers to show us deep white scars from knee to ankle.

Although Cobb finds it difficult to be a spectator at ball games, he plans to see a couple while he's in New York. He wants to see Joe DiMaggio. Seems he took Joe aside this winter in San Francisco and told him it was time for him to lead the league in hitting. Told him to get in shape, stay in shape, and not to wear himself out by practicing before a game. Ty thinks that DiMaggio some day will replace either Ruth, Speaker, Jackson or himself as one of the greatest outfielders of all time.

Incognito—But Still the Same Old Gehrig Grin

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Lou Gehrig, ailing Yankee first baseman, didn't fool these Minneapolis youngsters with a "traveling name." On his way by plane from Kansas City to Rochester, Minn., for a thorough physical checkup, the "Iron Horse" lounged during a stop-over at the airport and was promptly recognized by the kids with the cameras. The miracle of modern aviation held no interest for the young fans from then on

Louis-Farr May Meet In London Title Bout

Mike Jacobs and Joe Gould Talk Over Plans For Championship Go in September; Braddock-Farr Fight in England Canceled

By the United Press.

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 13.—Joe Louis and Tommy Farr in London for the world's heavyweight championship in September. That was the undercover talk at the Brown Bomber's training camp today, as he reached the half-way mark in his preparations for Tony Galento on June 28.

And a few open manifestations indicated the same Louis-to-London movement. They were:

1. Joe Gould, manager of Tommy Farr and Jim Braddock, spent most of his time at the camp in earnest huddles with Promoter Mike Jacobs and Co-Manager Julian Black of the Louis entourage.

2. After which, Gould announced that the proposed Braddock-Farr fight in London in July has been canceled, and former Champion Braddock, instead, will referee the Solly Krieger-Al Hostak middleweight title scrap at Seattle on June 27.

3. Promoter Jacobs announced, "After my lease expires at the Hippodrome in August, I shall launch out as an international promoter. I shall stage fights in European capitals that can g-u-a-r-a-n-t-e-e enough money to my Twentieth Century Club and to my fighters to make it worth while."

4. Ray Carlen, manager of young Lou Nova, indicated that he would not accept a September title match with Louis, if Louis beats Galento on June 28, because "Nova and Louis will draw four times as much money next year."

(5) Henry Armstrong, world lightweight-welterweight champion, was at the Bomber's camp to receive two gold belts from Nat Fleischer, editor of Ring Magazine, and Hurricane Henry was busy answering questions of Louis and company regarding the swell treatment accorded Negro scrappers invading the British Isles.

At the outdoor ringside, under the maple trees, Gould seemed actually pleased that the once scheduled and later canceled Braddock-Farr fight would not take place. He was all smiles as he said to Black, "it will be the happiest moment of my life when I see your beaming countenance across that London ring—in the opposite corner." Gould added that Black should be smiling, too, because of that "'guarantee of $250,000, and at the option of a percentage slice of the gate."

Even Bomber Joe seemed interested in the British trend. In the dressing room, while donning his togs for the workout, he practiced a few limehouse idioms under the tutelage of Prof. Armstrong, recently returned from a London scrap. And everyone laughed right merrily at the heavyweight champion's absurd Cockney accent.

As if wishing to assure himself of this London trip, Louis tore through five rounds of boxing with more zip than ever had been noted in previous conditioning workouts. He belted and bloodied the two hefty, Galento-type spar mates—Mickey Hayes, of Milwaukee, and Joe Banovic, of Binghamton, N. Y.—sharpened his right hand on Jim Howell, of New York, for two sessions and tried to knock out George Nicholson, of Yonkers, N. Y., during their round. Negro Nicholson has been Joe's sparring partner ever since the Bomber knocked out Maxie Baer in 1935, but today was the first time he ever acted the savage against George.

Gehrig, at Mayo Clinic, Says He Is 'Feeling Fine'

Rochester, Minn., June 13 (AP).—Lou Gehrig, New York Yankee first baseman, arrived here today for a physical checkup at the Mayo Clinic.

The veteran Yankee first-sacker said he thought the "boys in general" were taking his physical condition a little too seriously."

"I'm feeling all right," Gehrig added.

While he has high hopes of returning to the diamond soon, Gehrig said "that remains to be seen."

Gehrig, who arrived at the Minneapolis Airport shortly after 10 a. m. today and left that city at 1:30 p. m., went from the Rochester Airport to a hotel. He was not expected to go to the Mayo Clinic until Wednesday morning.

Last Place Browns Get Yanks' Slugger

Joe Gallagher Goes To Po' Old St. Louis To Aid Batting Situation

St. Louis, June 13 (AP).—The last-place St. Louis Brown announced late today they had obtained Joe Gallagher, slugging young outfielder, from the World Champion New York Yankees.

The Browns gave up Infielder Roy Hughes and an undisclosed amount of cash for Gallagher, whom the Yankees recently sent to their Newark farm club in exchange for Pitcher Russo.

Gallagher came to the Yankees from Kansas City and he was so confident of his ability to stick with the champions that he threatened to quit baseball rather than report to Newark.

He will join the Browns in Philadelphia tomorrow.

The Browns also announced they had sold Outfielder Mel Mazzera outright to Toronto.

Hughes, who plays shortstop, second or third base, came to the Browns from Cleveland in 1938 but he saw little service. He batted .281 last year and this year has an average almost too small to mention—.095 with two hits out of 21 times at bat.

Houghton and Walper Share Golf Honors

Former Wins Pro-Amateur With Peacock and Latter Pro-Sweepstakes at Chevy Chase; Winners Turn in 65; Mid-Atlantic Today

Al Houghton and Leo Walper, whose golf has been the best of the season among the District pros, continued to hold the spotlight yesterday in the pro-amateur tournament at Chevy Chase preceding the thirty-fifth annual Middle Atlantic Tournament, Houghton pairing with Roger Peacock to win the pro-am with a 65 best ball and Walper topping the pro-sweepstakes field with 67.

Peacock's round of 71, that with Houghton's 70 accounted for the best ball of 65, 4 under par, placed the Indian Spring amateur in a favorite's role in the Middle Atlantic event starting today. The former Maryland and District champion is apparently on his game, and looks to be the man to beat.

Walper, Partner Second

A putter that seldom missed led to Walper's fine sub-par round. The driving range mentor started with a bogey five, hooking a spoon shot, and was over on the eleventh but his four birdies and 12 pars were from putts of 50 feet on down. He holed one of that length, one of 40 feet, a 30 footer, and several from 5 to 20 feet. He required only 11 putts on the first nine, but his second was nearer regulation figures, with 16 putts, 27 for the day.

Walper and his partner, Russ Hollebaugh, won second in the pro-am on Walper's score of 67, Hollebaugh missing several opportunities to save

L. Waner Receives 15-Year-Old Note Offering Him Job

Pittsburgh, June 13 (AP).—Friends of Lloyd (Little Poison) Waner learned tonight he only recently received a letter mailed 15 years ago by the late George T. (Miracle Man) Stallings, which might have greatly altered his major league career.

Stallings won his title of miracle man by piloting the frisky Boston Braves from last place in July to a pennant and world series title in 1914.

Ten years later, while managing the Rochester Internationals, Stallings wrote the letter to Waner, then a youngster attending college at Ada, Okla. The ex-Braves' boss offered Lloyd a job at Rochester and promised to prepare him for a career in the big show.

On May 13, 1929, Stallings died.

Indian Spring Beaten Out By 3 Points

Manor Close Third On Final Day of Play; Congressional Finishes in Fourth

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A well-balanced and unexpectedly strong Chevy Chase team climaxed a ten-week battle by winning the first team championship of the District Women's Golf Association yesterday at Army and Navy, defeating the defending champions from Indian Spring, 6½ to 5½, in a match not decided until the final threesome came in with 2 points and victory.

The triumph over the second place team left Chevy Chase with 77 points and Indian Spring with 74. Manor was a close third with 69, while Congressional, Army and Navy, Columbia, Woodmont, Washington and Argyle trailed in order.

The Winning Team

The team that scored the upset triumph over the highly favored 1938 titleholders yesterday was composed of Mrs. Bishop Hill, Mrs. Landra Platt, Mrs. Y. E. Booker, Louise Claytor, Mrs. L. O. Cameron, Mrs. F. D. Letts, Mrs. Hugh Rowan and Mrs. William Flather. Others that played in previous matches and aided in running up the 77-point total included Mrs. Oscar Coolican, first team captain of the association; Mrs. J. W. Beller and Susan Hacker. Mrs. Letts was captain of the winning octet.

Leading by 2 points entering the final day's play, the Chevy Chase rooters were anxious when Mrs. Betty Meckley and Mrs. Walter Stokes, of Indian Spring, came in with a 3-point shutout over the top twosome of the new champions, Mrs. Platt and Mrs. Hill. The Meckley-Stokes duo had a best ball of 75, and the former an 80, despite two 7s.

Win First Nine

Mrs. Booker and Miss Claytor won the first 9 and the 18 from Mrs. K. S. Giles and Mrs. Charlotte Stern with little difficulty and gained a halve on the back 9 when Mrs. Booker dropped a 3-foot put on the final green to halve the pars of their opponents, netting 2½ points for Chevy Chase.

Mrs. L. O. Cameron and Mrs. F. D. Letts, Chevy Chase, then scored an odd-point decision over Mrs. C. P. Medley and Mrs. Ora Emge in the third bracket, bringing the score to 4½ all with one match on the course.

The winning points were turned in by Mrs. Hugh Rowan and Mrs. William Flather, who after losing the first 9, 1 up, clinched the huge trophy with a spurt on the back 9 that won four holes in a row and the match on the seventeenth green over Mrs. H. W. Sharpe and Mrs. J. W. Bullock, of the Four Corners Club.

Other results in the final day's play found Manor clearly proving its rights to third place with a 9½ to 3½ victory over the hosts, Congressional jumping into fourth place with a 11½ to ½ rout of Columbia, and Woodmont winning the seventh place battle from Washington, 8½ to 3½. Argyle drew a bye.

In previously concluded series, Congressional triumphed in the sec-

3 U. S. Teams Still in Play

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 13.—Three American teams remained in running for the doubles title of the French hard courts tennis championships today after two were eliminated.

Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, former United States Junior champion, and Charles Harris, of Palm Beach, Fla., moved into the semi-finals of the men's doubles with a 6—3, 6—3, 1—6, 6—3 decision over the Peter Geehland and Jan Van Den Eynde of Belgium.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., went into the same bracket of the mixed doubles by turning back Susan Noel, of England, and Jean Borotra, French veteran, 6—2, 7—5.

Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, favorite to win the men's singles, teamed with Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., to enter the quarter-finals of the mixed doubles. They defeated Miss N. Brown and F. H. D. Wilde, of England, 6—2, 6—2.

Eliminated in the men's doubles were Gene Smith and Bill Robertson, of California, and Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Wheeler in the women's doubles.

National P. G. A. Berth Eludes Wood

Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., June 13 (AP).—Tired from his long and unsuccessful effort to win the National Open golf crown at Philadelphia, Craig Wood missed out on another title chance today when he failed to qualify for the National P. G. A. championship in the Metropolitan District tournament.

Wood shot 74—73—147, two strokes above the qualifying limit, over the Briar Hills course.

The P. G. A. tournament will be played at the Pomonok Club, Flushing, Long Island, July 9 to 15.

Chisox Beat Dodgers

Charlestown, W. Va., June 13 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox pushed across three runs in the third inning today to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 3-2, before 4,000 fans in an exhibition game cut short in the sixth by rain.

British Poloists Still Trying to Take Cup—the Blighters

This little drama is entitled "Skene and Tyrrell-Martin Carry On"—or the final attempts of the British polo team to wrest away the cup the Americans won Sunday at Meadowbrook, Long Island. The lads are shown sneaking up on the trophy just after officials presented it to the Americans and filled it with champagne—which may have inspired the Britons' zeal. Left to right are Stewart Iglehart, Michael Phipps, Winston Guest and Thomas Hitchcock, of the American team; Mrs. Robert Strawbridge, jr., who presented the cup; Gerald Balding, Aidan Roark, Robert Skene, Eric Tyrrell-Martin and Robert E. Razzle Dazzle Wins Show Money; Root Rides Both Winners In Daily Double

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., June 13.—Ten minutes after a heavy downpour had turned the track into a canal, Jockey Woodrow Kirk and Nob, a 3-year-old son of Flag Pole, teamed to win the sixth race, outstanding event of a formful program. Installed a $5 favorite after being out of the pay circle in four races here, Nob splashed to the imaginary wire a length in advance of M. Seth's Toothpick. Razzle Dazzle, in the colors of Mrs. T. Lewis, was third in the field of seven going "about" 6 furlongs.

Owned by M. R. Waugh, Virginia sportsman, Nob survived a pace-setting struggle with Kissin Kid to take a definite lead and won under good handling. Toothpick and Razzle Dazzle were slow beginners, but came with rushes in the final test.

After Long Pass, a brisk worker and a dull runner in her previous outing, had won the first race at a $32.80 mutuel, the daily double fans who played Travelo in the second race and Top Shell in the third race collected $16.20.

Jockey Buddy Root rode both ends of the twin wager. Travelo's victory was the tenth of the meeting for R. F. Cook, young Washingtonian, who is leading the trainers at the meeting.

In the fourth race Jockey Kirk clicked with the favorite, Flagabout. Like Nob, Flagabout is by the sire Flag Pole. Prince Jock and Lyde followed the winner over the line.

Jockey Lou Machado kept the favorite players happy in the fifth race. Hi-Blaze scampered home in front of Seldomgo and Ginger Hackle. Seldomgo set most of the pace but could not cope with Hi-Blaze's closing bid.

Tyr Victor in Dull Delaware Program

Delaware Park, Del., June 13 (AP).—Best offering of a drab program at Delaware Park was the one mile and one-sixteenth of the sixth race, a claimer that attracted nine starters in a $2,000 top and bottom claiming bracket. The winner turned up in Louise J. Hickman's Tyr which was fortunate in securing racing room on the inside from the half-mile pole to take command on the far turn and last long enough to earn a head decision over D. J. Sullivan's Lourdes. One and one-half additional lengths away, Hit and Run was third for M. J. Reed. The winner was well handled by Jockey Willy Dufford.

Many Stings Wins at Suffolk

Boston, June 13 (AP).—Leo J. Mark's Many Stings, away from the races since February, flashed the fastest 6 furlongs of the New England season today when he led J. W. Y. Martin's Slow Motion by a length and a half in the Suffolk Downs allowance sprint. Many Stings was clocked in 1:10 3-5 and paid $15.80.

D. A. Wood's Infidox showed a nose back of Slow Motion in the seven-horse field. Jockey Kelley, who rode the Martin sprinter, lodged a foul against Many Stings for interfering as he rushed on the outside while turning for home, but it was disallowed.

Slow Motion, which wilted under the victor's terrific pace during the final quarter, paid $4.80 for place, and Infidox, the early pacemaker, returned $5.60 for show.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., June 13.
Dear Al:

Despite the fact that the Stevens' Dish Breakers are demanding a saliva test of Bob McHugh, our star pitcher, the Bennings Press Box Pests won today's ball game, 10-6. We admit that McHugh was a stake horse running in $600 company. Age Sherry sized up the situation by saying, "What's the story on this pitcher, you hear the ball swish and you can't see it?" Joe Stevens starred in a relief hurling role for his team and also hit a smashing homer, the longest drive of the game. Millard Trussell's two running catches and Buck Middleton's spear of a line drive were outstanding tidbits. The game was delayed several minutes when Pork Chops, running bases for me, disappeared rounding third. He was finally located when somebody turned over the base. "Poke" scored two runs, worked three-eighths and spent most of the afternoon cooling out. The Pests were 8-1 shots when they took the field but, after scoring four times in the first inning, Sammy Palumbo made them 1-2. Nancy Pride, in today's second race, is a daughter of the mare, Lilteen, which has been running here. Lilteen goes tomorrow. Palumbo is leading the local riders with 27 winners in 25 days. Unable to get Lecture to show speed, Trainer C. J. Meister has shipped the plater back to Delaware Park to Mose Lowenstein. Dark Ace, fast-working juvenile, which ran out badly here the other day, has been shipped to Delaware Park. Might be worth watching. BILL.

First race—Prairie Man turned in a smashing race last out and seems well placed in this field of maidens. I see no reason for mistakes. Alice O was a tip last out and ran a fair race. Could improve. Chiriqui may be in the money circle.

Second race—Center March turned in a good race last week and will be ready for the best in this field. Looks like the right spot. Radial has improved and is dangerous. Beryl King, if taken off the reserve list, would be a keen factor.

Third race—Boro Poker has done about everything asked of late and if able to overcome the inside post position, will take care of this company. Justa Canter belongs with these and the route suits. Notoriety favors the 4½-furlong distance.

Fourth race—Time Her gets a slight edge over the star sprinter, Consistent. Both are fit as hands make horses. Timber Lady and Cats Cradle are due some respect in an open race.

Fifth race—Green Water is the logical choice in this field. She has been having poor racing luck. Schley Buck has plenty of foot and is due to be close. Tuleyries Lad for the show end.

Sixth race—The Horst entry of Kal Min and Miss Epe gets my call in this field. Both have missed on poor racing luck. Dun Lucky is another of those fit horses trained by Red Kent. Pandoramint moves up if the mud comes.

Seventh race—Pencader has an edge over these distance platers and gets a favorable post position. Last Scamp has been in trouble repeatedly of late. Some Groucher has plenty of stretch speed.

Eighth race—Jimmy D comes out of No. 1 stall and may make every post a winning one. Justa Pilgrim and Keswick Hill to take care of the others.

Substitute race—If the first is used, I'll take Time Piece, Lilteen and Dilwin. If the second is used, I'll take Royal Veil, Adriatic and Kitty's Rival.

Best bet—Jimmy D.

WALTER "JESSE" JAMES

WALTER JAMES

All he asks is reasonably good backing and he'll lay 'em in there for hours without letting up. He's no strikeout king, this righthander with the outlaw nickname, but his curve balling has made the city's best sandlot sluggers curse their anemic pop flies to the infield. The Heurich Brewers who won first half Industrial League honors Saturday behind his four-hit effort, call Walter the "Iron Man" because he has worked all their league games, winning seven and losing only two.

Local baseball circles got their first glimpse of Walter in 1934, when he came up from a year with the Richmond Colts, of the Piedmont League, as a beardles youngster of 19. Chris Heurich saw him first, got his name on a contract, and has had reason to be thankful for his foresight ever since. In his first year here, Walter was named the outstanding sandlotter of the city in a poll conducted by The Washington Post.

Besides his diamond talent, the young man from Rocky Mount, N. C., also plays a wicked game of table tennis. In everything, just as in baseball, he gives all he's got. It was probably that which caused a spectator at Saturday's game to comment, "I never saw anybody try so hard all the time as that James guy." —BURNETT.

Police Field Meet Plans Announced

Event on Labor Day Will Benefit Retired Metropolitan Cops

Plans for a gala three-hour police field meet—featuring everything from trick gymnastics to tug o' wars—on Labor Day at Griffith Stadium were announced yesterday by the Metropolitan Police Department.

Tickets for the meet went on sale yesterday as your friends, the policemen, launched a campaign designed to guarantee that members of the force whose days of service are over will be able to retire with some sense of financial security.

Members of the Police Department, who have lent a helping hand to countless campaigns to raise funds for civic organizations and enterprises, are staging the field meet for the benefit of the Retiring Policemen's Association—the first time in six years they have conducted a police benefit campaign.

"Retirements from the service have been extensive, naturally causing a severe drain on our finances," William G. Stott, president of the association, announced. "This organization only once before asked for assistance from the public. During 1933 a baseball game was held at Griffith Stadium between the Baltimore Police Department and the Metropolitan Police, at which time approximately $15,000 was realized from the sale of tickets.

Nats to Continue Accent-on-Youth Policy Despite Setbacks

Pritchard, Minor Star, To Play Today

Use of Charlotte First Baseman Shows Griff's Confidence in Youth; Gedeon Out

Unshaken by the plight of his seventh-place ball club, Clark Griffith surveyed the wreckage of his first-division hopes yesterday and reiterated his policy of rebuilding along youthful lines.

Griffith absolved Manager Bucky Harris of any blame for the dismal showing of the Nats, declaring, "It's not a good ball club—yet. I foresaw all this."

The Nats' owner is content, he says, to take the financial rap that a second-division club produces. "Certainly, I don't expect big crowds when a team is not going well, and we may take a financial loss on the season, but I'm prepared for that. We've got a good, young team in the making.

"I could improve the club by signing veteran players, and perhaps finish in the first division, but it wouldn't be a lasting improvement. When my club arrives, I want it to last. We have the nucleus of a good ball team, and we have young fellows in the minor leagues who are shaping up well."

Griffith's accent-on-youth policy will be manifested today when the Nats take the field in a single game against the Chicago White Sox. At first base will be young Bob Prichard, hefty-hitting rookie from Charlotte making his maiden appearance in a Washington uniform, and at second base will be Jimmie Bloodworth, strong-armed lad from Springfield.

Myer on Way Out

Prichard is at first because he is the only first baseman with the club, but the assignment of Bloodworth to the second base job presages the definite decline of Buddy Myer. A sore arm is handicapping the veteran Myer's play, but Bloodworth has long been regarded by the Nats' bosses as his successor.

"In the event that Bloodworth doesn't make it at second base, we have a young fellow who definitely will," declared Griffith. "He's down at Charlotte and his name is Morris Aderholt, the big right-handed hitter we gave a tryout in the spring. He's big-league timber and may make it as early as next year. Hits the ball a mile and is a smooth fielder."

The opportunity to clinch the first base job is wide open for Prichard, a .386 hitter at Charlotte, but the lad on whom the Nats are casting doting eyes is young Jack Sanford, the recently signed first baseman from the University of Richmond. Sanford took over the job vacated by Prichard at Charlotte, and with another year of organized baseball experience is expected to be the No. 1 first sacker of the Nats.

Collegian to Minors

Elmer Gedeon, the college boy first baseman from the University of Michigan now with the club, will be farmed out by the Nats.

Griffith called Manager Bucky Harris into conference yesterday and the chief topic of their conversation was the mysterious collapse of the Venezuelan pitcher, Alex Alexandra.

"My catchers, Rick Ferrell and Angelo Giuliani tell me that Alex's recent showings have been his own fault," explained Harris. "The side-arm fast ball which was his best pitch isn't sinking as it did when he was winning ball games for us. He's letting it go from above his waist when formerly he pitched it semi-underhand. With that fault corrected, I think he'll still win."

Fight Film Bill Passed by Senate

By the Associated Press.

The Senate approved and sent to the House today legislation legalizing interstate transportation of prize fight films.

The Interstate Commerce Committee, recommending the bill, said transportation had been banned in 1912 because of "racial feeling" aroused by the victory of Jack Johnson, Negro, over Heavyweight Champion Jim Jeffries.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

RUNYON

We note that Brother Winchell was giving out a little kindly advice the other day about how a gentleman may hide what he delicately refers to as a bay windows, but which in our set is known as a watermelon.

This is that waist-line tumor that comes with the middle years and hearty feeding and gives a gentleman the appearance of having swallowed a nice large Rocky Ford whole. In other times is was known as a corporation or corporosity, and as an alderman's paunch, but that was when aldermen were commonly fat, paunchy men.

The popular theory was that aldermanic pickings made them that way, though we think their uniform corpulence may have been because the old-time political bosses looked askance at lean and hungry Cassiuses and favored the fat men who slept o' nights.

Weyr anyway, Brother Winchell says a gentleman may conceal his watermelon if he follows these instructions: "Don't be lazy. Hold in the stomach muscles so they will harden. Sit tall, Walk tall."

We will not deny that there is merit in Brother Winchell's advice. However, we see in it certain weaknesses, as, for instance, the order to hold in the stomach muscles so they will harden. We have tried that. The trouble is the price of that advice is the same as the cost of liberty—eternal vigilance, and it takes a mighty watchful and patient fellow to follow it.

Watermelon Pops Out

We went around one time for days holding in our stomach muscles until our chest was out like a pouter pigeon's and then in an unguarded moment we relaxed them suddenly and the imprisoned watermelon popped out. It was most embarassing because the release carried away all the forward suspender buttons and we had to hurry home for repairs holding up the trouserloons with both hands

As for sitting tall and walking tall, that requires too much of a strain for us. We have watched those middle-aged gentlemen dancing in the night clubs and noted the stiffish way they hold themselves and we spot them at once for fellows who are trying to conceal the watermelon and partially succeeding at the sacrifice of much nervous and bodily energy.

They dare not breathe from away down deep for fear they will lose control of the watermelon and perhaps bump their partner plumb out of the dance arena They are self-conscious and uncomfortable. We have long given up attempted concealment of this nature and thus are able to sit fully relaxed and completely at ease, just holding the watermelon on our lap.

Shoe Lace Test

However, we must admit we gave it quite a battle for a while, The first time we got a sideways glimpse of ourself in a mirror and saw that we were achieving a setback type of physical architecture, we thought it was some temporary inflation that would soon pass away, but when the infallible test of tying the shoe laces disclosed that it was a serious condition, we decided to do something about it.

It is difficult and fatiguing to tie the shoe laces over a well developed watermelon. Bending over causes a rush of blood to the head and produces dizziness. Pulling the feet up into the lap forces you to lean backwards and makes the tying of the laces a pull on the leg muscles. It may cause charley horses, or knots in the muscles. Standing up and putting the feet on a chair is about the best way but it tends to damage furniture.

Oddly enough, tying a necktie also becomes something of a nuisance to a gentleman with a pronounced watermelon. You seldom see one whose necktie is neatly tied. We have never been able to understand this, though it may be that by the time a gentleman with a watermelon gets around to tying the tie he is puffing so he just gives the necktie a lick and a promise.

We tried exercise as a means of effacing the watermelon, but the exercise only made us so hungry we had to eat more than usual, and we are inclined to think that the extra eating offset any effect the exercise may have had. At least, it was our observation that the more we exercised and the more we ate the oftener we had to have the waist band let out.

Finally we came to the conclusion that there was no use trying to get rid of the watermelon and that the only thing to do was to conceal it in some manner, so that the world would not know that we had lost our once athletic figure. A fellow told us that we ought to get one of those elastic girdles. He said they pulled the watermelon in until it was no bigger than a cherry. He said a girdle would give us a positively sylph-like form. He said all the hot men wore them.

So we got a girdle. It came under some fancy name, but it was a girdle just the same. It was made of a rubbery material and it hauled in the watermelon just like the man said, all right, but we wore it to a party at which ladies were present and what do you think happened? A spot on our back under the girdle started itching and we almost went daffy because we could not get at it, so we gave up struggling against the watermelon then and there and have since let nature take her course.

Sports Postscripts

It was just a little ironical that Davie Johnsen, one of the most talented young tennis player developed in the District, should upset Hugh Lynch in the semifinals en route to his singles championship of the City of Washington tournament, for Hugh has helped Davie develop the strokes observers acclaim as "perfect." Last year when still a junior and far from the finished and confident player that he is today, Johnsen accepted Lynch's invitation to pair with him as a doubles team and profited greatly . . . always possessed naturally of an adaptability to all of the basic strokes and even the auxiliary ones which many champions never master, Johnsen nevertheless, was a bit timid to use his overhead game or come to the net to volley . . . the knack of knowing when to use these strokes and also the building of his present confidence and other things usually learned only by long experience, Johnsen picked up partially from Lynch and partially from his father who has been a patient teacher since Davie was little more than 6 years old . . .

JUNE STAN

Speaking of this sandy-haired 142-pound George Washington freshman, no less a respected local tennis authority than Dooly Mitchell believes there is only one player in town who figures to beat Johnsen now . . . and, if you haven't guessed, he is Barney Welsh, perennial District champion, who is busy these days practicing on his own courts behind his Rockville home for the D. C. championships starting July 1.

June Booth Stan, one of the outstanding girl swimmers of Washington before her marriage last year to the local sports columnist, is in training for the D. C. outdoor championships and expects to make a good showing in the backstroke events . . . Herbie Munhall, football and basketball player at St. John's Prep, last night received the Kernan Medal for excellence last year in military science, the highest award by a cadet at that school . . . already approached with several athletic scholarship offers, the 190-pound, 17-year-old youngster hopes to go to Harvard . . . Ken Dalby, No. 1 player on the Western High tennis team and sports editor of its school paper last year, is headed for Kenyon College and is looking forward to playing tennis for Bruce Barnes, its most successful coach . . . Bill Burke, Georgetown's All-District guard last season, is life-guarding at the Army and Navy Country Club pool . . . Rumor has it that George Pajak, star sophomore basketball and baseball player, won't return to Georgetown in the fall, principally because he believes he got a "raw deal" in basketball . . . Mrs. William F. Dismer, jr., wife of the local tennis writer, is the mother of their first child born Sunday morning . . . the new arrival, a 7¼-pound baby girl, will be christened Mary Ann.

Horseshoe Stars Play at Commerce Grounds Today

A highlight of the horseshoe pitching program in Washington will be the meeting of Clayton C. Benson, local and Virginia champion for several years, and the Massachusetts State and New England titlist, Jimmy O'Shea, on the Commerce Building courts today at 5:30 p. m.

O'Shea is one of the country's ranking stars, having beaten such stars as Ted Allen, Jimmy Risk and Fernando Isais. He has registered 93 ringers in 100 shoes in competition, set a high mark of 34 consecutive ringers, and is co-holder of the world record for 16 consecutive doubles.

On Friday night, on the private courts of Senator Elmer Lundeen, of Minnesota, another match will be staged, pitting O'Shea against the pride of Richmond, Raymond L. Frye. The latter will also take part in a four-out-of-seven match with Benson Sunday on the Commerce courts. The public is invited free of charge.

Snead, Cotton Co-Favorites At St. Andrews

Rule 121 Choices in British Open Play Slated Next Month

By the Associated Press.

St. Andrews, Scotland, June 13. The Scotch took one canny glance at the entry list for the British Open golf championship tonight and quickly made America's Sam Snead, who blew a chance to win the U. S. Open on the last hole, and Henry Cotton, the English stylist, joint favorites at 12 to 1. The championship will be played July 3-8.

Five other Americans were entered but whether all would compete wis doubtful. Snead has not announced definitely whether he would play. He has a date in the Inverness tournament at Toledo, Ohio, this week.

Johnny Bulla, of Chicago, leader at the three-quarter mark in the United States Open, and George Low, jr., of Jenkinstown, Pa., sailed from New York today. Lawson Little, who won the British Amateur title in 1934-1935, will sail tomorrow and Gene Sarazen, winner of the British Open in 1932, expects to follow later if he plays well at Toledo. Tommy Armour, the 1931 victor, sent in his entry but does not expect to make the trip.

Sarazen, Little and Bobby Locke, South African sensation, followed Snead and Cotton, winner two years ago, in the betting at 14 to 1. Grouped at 16 to 1 were the defending champion, Reggie Whitcome, Armour, Pulla, 19-year-old Jim Bruen, Irish champion, and Alf Perry, who carried off the honors in 1935.

The United States hasn't lost a British Open at St. Andrews since 1921, when Jock Hutchinson, of Chicago, won. Bobby Jones won here in 1927, and Denny Shute in 1933 after a playoff with Craig Wood.

St. Andrews people were disappointed Wood and Shute did not enter. There has been a good deal of sympathy here the last few days for Wood because of his loss to Byron Nelson in the United States Open after two playoffs. Though Snead finished eleventh, ten strokes behind Cotton, in the 1937 Open, the Scotch believe Slammin' Sam's game has improved greatly.

In announcing the entry list that includes the former titleholders and 24 challengers from other countries, Henry Cullen, secretary of the Royal and Ancient, said the famous old course, badly burned by the drought, would be closed until a day or two before the tournament starts. Unless there is a great deal of rain in the next two weeks, Cullen expects a record score.

strokes. Lewis Worsham, host club assistant pro, and Bobby Brownell, Manor amateur, had a best ball of 68 for the third and last prize. Houghton's 70 was second in the pro sweeps.

Houghton and Peacock each played fine golf, but had to rally to win after a pair of lapses on the second nine. They were out in 32, three under par, but both went over on 12 and 14. They regained the strokes, Peacock with a birdie on 16 and Houghton with one on the next, and the former chipped dead to the pin for a par on the last hole. Houghton was the big gun going out, with a subpar 34, including a bogey on the ninth.

The young stars are the outstanding entries in the Mid-Atlantic play starting today with a field of 77. From Brownell, Bogart, Sharkey, Shea, Yount may come the champion, while the defending champion from Baltimore, Otto Greiner, stands a good chance of coming through again.

Peacock Is a Threat

Peacock, in a comeback role, looks dangerous, while former champion, Harry Pitt, may have a say in the matter, or Volney Burnett, Martin McCarthy and several others.

Post entries included Tom Belshe, Indian Spring; Dr. Robert A. Keilty, Congressional, and Ralph Gibson, Manor.

Al Houghton (Georgetown Prep) and Roger Peacock (Indian Spring), 32-33, 65.
Leo Walper (unattached) and Russ Hollebaugh (Indian Spring), 34-33, 67.
Lewis Worsham (Chevy Chase) and Bobby Brownell (Manor), 33-35, 68.
Ralph Beach and Nathan Kaufman, jr. (Suburban), 69.
Fred McLeod and George Miller (Columbia), 72.
George Diffenbaugh and Maury Fitzgerald (Kenwood), 72.
Gene Larkin (Woodmont) and Louis Fuchs (Congressional), 72.
Tommy Ryan (Belle Haven) and Gillie Young (Congressional), 72.
Mel Shorey (East Potomac) and Charles Malone (Indian Spring), 73.
Cliff Spencer (Beaver Dam) and Robert Stead, jr. (Chevy Chase), 73.
Virgil Worsham (Chevy Chase) and Ralph Bogart (Army and Navy), 74.
Robert Barnett and Frank Reeside (Chevy Chase), gained out.

Bill Ackerman

on Fishing

Wire from Bill Sharpe yesterday, down in North Carolina, to the effect that amberjack and dolphin are being caught off Diamond Shoals.

ACKERMAN

The first cobia of the season was taken last week at Ocracoke. Good news for many local anglers who fished out of Hatteras Inlet last summer and found it very little different than that found in southern Florida during the winter months.

Paul Townsend's Jacpau III with Capt. Bill Hatch has been at Coinjack, N. C., for the past ten days waiting for favorable conditions to try the blue marlin fishing. In addition it is very likely that other boats, northward bound for the summer, will stop off for a try at this new fishing that Hugo Rutherfurd opened up last season with a fish close to the 500-pound mark.

We have always believed that it is the angler who is willing to try almost anything at least once, that not only has most of the fun, but also brings home the most fish. Because three local anglers believe the same as we, there is an out-of-the-ordinary catch to note.

E. M. Bavis, R. R. Keifer and A. P. Margardt, fishing Sunday with Capt. Lee Savage on his Sea Gull out of Ocean City, were trying the unmarked wreck below the inlet for seatrout. They found them—29, for a total of 84 pounds. The catch itself is in no way out of the ordinary, for some really fine weakfishing has been had along Maryland beahces this season. The manner of their catching, however, is something else. These fish were caught on 2½-ounce Heddon baitcasting rods with Creek Chub plugs, and it is needless to say a grand time was had by all. The average was slightly under 3 pounds, although several were well over the 4-pound mark, while the prize of the day was a 7¾-pounder.

Another local angler, Bill Prentiss, of the City Postoffice, fishing in almost the same general locality—in the surf at Fox Hill Levels, hung on to a 42½-pound channel bass, and considered the day a complete success when he landed it.

The marlin fleet at Ocean City has officially opened the marlin season with their "Guides On Parade," even though it is still a little early and the catches are mostly Boston mackerel and blues, the latter running to a fairly good size. Capt. Crawford Savage reports on two days—one, of 86 and the other, 92—up to 4½ pounds. Capt. Jim Whaley, on his Em Priss II, has been fishing up to the north and for that reason taking big catches of mackerel.

Upset Marks Western Golf

Helen Hicks Eliminated At St. Louis

Dorothy Foster, a Music Student, Wins Match, 5-4; Helen Dettweiler Winner

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 13.—A freckle-faced piano teacher, a 15-year-old school girl and a veteran poured plenty of spice into the first round of play in the Women's Western Open Golf tournament today.

Dorothy Foster, of Springfield, Ill., who left a music class to compete here, gave some lessons in golf and dropped one of the favorites by the wayside in a stunning upset.

She trimmed Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb, former National champion and now a New York City professional, 5 and 4. Miss Foster, former Illinois Women's champion, was 3 up at the turn and continued to ram down her putts beautifully to end the match with four pars and a birdie deuce.

All the other favorites came through the first round nicely.

The "baby" of the tournament, Jeanne Cline, 15-year-old Bloomington, Ill., high school sophomore, advanced to the second round with a 3 and 2 win over Iva Mae Pilcher, of Mexico, Mo.

They made the turn all even, going out in 45, but the youngster, displaying excellent form and with energy to burn, rolled in a couple pars and a birdie to gain the 3-point margin.

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, veteran Kansas City professional seeking her third Western Open title in five years, breezed through her opening match, winning easily, 8 and 6, from Mrs. W. F. Anderson, of St. Louis. She turned the out nine in 41, 4 over par.

Mrs. Hill is one of three pros remaining in competition. All are paired in the upper bracket and one of the trio is almost certain of reaching the finals.

One of the "businesswomen" players, Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., scored a 4 and 2 victory over Mrs. M. B. Williams, of St. Louis, while the other professional, Virginia Pepp, St. Louis, was pressed hard to win, 1 up, over Mrs. Charles Dennehy, of Chicago.

Four standouts in the lower bracket are Ella Mae Williams, attractive Chicago girl; Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis, Minn., the defending champion; Phyllis Buchanan, Denver, and Mrs. Burt Weil, Cincinnati, former Ohio State champion.

Second-round championship flight pairings:

Upper Bracket

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City, vs. Shirley Ann Johnson, Chicago.

Helen Dettweiler, Washington, D. C., vs. Helen Hofmann, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dorothy Foster, Springfield, Ill., vs. Virginia Pepp, St. Louis.

Jeanne Cline, Bloomington, Ill., vs. Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago.

Lower Bracket

Ella Mae Williams, Chicago, vs. Mrs. Burt Weil, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mrs. Alberta Neblett, New Orleans, vs. Mrs. Sam Israel, New Orleans.

Beatrice Barrett, Minneapolis, Minn., vs. Mrs. Charles Harting, St. Louis.

Goldie Bateson, Milwaukee, Wis., vs. Phyllis Buchanan, Denver.

Irish Vets Battle For Metro Lead

Whether the undefeated Irish War Veterans, tied for first place in the Metro Night Softball League with Tru-Blue, are able to continue in their exalted position will depend largely on the hurling effectiveness of "Tarzan" Webb, veteran pitcher, when the vets face Arlington Democrats in the feature at Ballston Stadium tonight.

Webb will have the Democrats' new star, "Bullet" Oskin opposing him, and an interesting pitching duel is expected. The Democrats are in third place, a half game behind the deadlocked leaders, and a victory for Arlington tonight will put Tru-Blu at the top, with the Veterans and Arlington tied for second.

A preliminary to the feature will be the clash of Navy Department and Phil Bobys at 8 p. m. The main game starts immediately afterward.

Blues Strengthened For Hustlers' Game

Lou Blue's Baseball School nine yesterday had signed three outstanding players for its intercity game with Ray Gardner's Frederick (Md.) Hustlers at Bays' Republic Stadium, Ballston, Va., tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock.

Twin brothers George and Francis Coakley, third baseman and outfielder, respectively, at Clemson College, and Bob (Lefty) McIntire, veteran local southpaw pitcher, are the newly acquired players.

Vincents Win

Vincent's A. C. baseball club, of Maryville, Va., defeated Brenizer A. C., 7-4, yesterday at Fairfax, Va., and followed it up with a victory over Astoria, 6-5, in 13 innings.

Yale Defeats Virginia, 5-3, In Short Game

By the Associated Press.

New Haven, Conn., June 13.—A big third inning in which ten men went to bat and five runs crossed the plate gave the Yale nine a 5-3 triumph over the University of Virginia ball club today in a contest called in the last of the fifth frame because of rain.

Willey, starting pitcher of the Southern club, was shelled to cover in the third when Yale collected three hits, two walks and a sacrifice fly to propel five runners over the plate. The most damaging blow was a long triple to left field by Capt. Eddie Collins, jr., that scored two mates.

In the fifth Virginia belted Jubitz for three runs but the tilt was halted by the umpires after Collins walked to open Yale's half as it was apparent the pitchers couldn't control the wet ball.

The victory squared the season's series between the teams. The Cavaliers won the first meeting which was played in April during the Bulldogs' Southern training trip.

Score by innings:

Virginia	0	0	0	0	3	—	3	5	1

Former Penn Star To Wrestle Here

A former college football player, Tex Hammer, late of the niversity of Pennsylvania, will make his debut before Washington wrestling fans Thursday night at Griffith stadium on the card featuring Jim Clinstock versus Laverne Baxter.

Tex will make his bow against a wrestling gentleman billed as the Syrian Sizzler—namely, Abe Kashey, who has been missing from the local scene for several months.

Baxter and Clinstock, who tripped the light fantastic together last week, with Clinstock finally losing, will do it all over again on a winner-take-all basis. The semiwindup will pit Chief Chewaki against Jules Strongbow. In event of rain the matches will go into Turner's arena.

Michigan Alumni To Fete Students

The Michigan Alumni Club of Washington hopes it is starting a precedent when it stages a dinner at the Lafayette Hotel tonight for the local high school lads who have been awarded the Michigan Honor Trophy. Selections will be made on the basis of athletic ability, scholastic record and leadership.

Carl E. Mapes, member of Congress and a Michigan alumnus, will present awards to each boy. All alumni and prospective students are cordially invited, and reservations may be made with Herman Schmidt at National 9237.

Fielders Want Team

A trio of versatile ball players, able to play the infield or outfield, is anxiously seeking berths with good teams. They are Don Wienege, John Middlekauf, and Forrest Rabenhorst. They were connected with the Takoma Reds and Brentwood teams last year. Rabenhorst can be reached at North 6104.

N. C. C. A. Attacks A. A. U. Secretary In Los Angeles

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, June 13.—As track stars trooped into Los Angeles today for the National Collegiate Athletic Association championships, warfare brewed between N. C. A. A. leaders and Dan Ferris, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Hub of the trouble was John Woodruff, Pittsburgh's running star, who reswitched plans to come here after Ferris warned he would jeopardize" his 1940 Olympic Games eligibility if he didn't compete in the Princeton invtation meet this week-end.

Arnold Eddy, promnent in N. C. A. A. circles and secretary-treasurer of the Southern Pacific chapter of the A. A. U., accused Ferris of "meddling" in college affairs. He demanded "by what authority can Ferris 'jeopardize' the standing of a college athlete who was to compete for his college in the National Collegiate championships?"

Abrams-Brouillard Start Elimination

With two world middleweight champions currently in circulation, Col. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, yesterday said the Georgie Abrams-Lou Brouillard fight Monday night at Griffith Stadium would be recognized as part of a proposed elimination series to clear up the middleweight muddle.

At the same time, it was announced that the winner of the Abrams-Brouillard fight may meet the winner of the Walter Woods-Ceferino Garcia bout Thursday in New York's Madison Square Garden.

While still in the nebulous state, plans for the elimination series would be patterned after the tournament begun here last summer in the featherweight division, and ending recently in Providence, R. I., with Joey Archibald winning the title, Col. Miller, an official of the National Boxing Association, stated.

Abrams, it was said, is now unofficially rated No. 5 among the middleweights by the N. B. A. Brouillard, former middleweight and welterweight champion, is in the honorable mention lists.

The 23-year-old Louisianan, twice winner of the Southern crown, a former national inter-collegiate champion and Walker Cup player, took a one-shot advantage over the field.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

LISTEN for "The Washington Post March" at whatever night spot you're attending tomorrow night. Every ace orchestra in town will play this stirring tune and with the fanciest musical trimmings that have ever glorified this most famous of Sousa's marches.

MAYFAIR CHANGES COMING: Into Mayfair on June 26 will come the Trocadero Trio, fresh from Chicago, full of the zipping spirit of the "Windy City." The Troc Trio includes two lasses and a lad, all singers, and playing the bass, accordion and piano.

But every silver lining has a cloud, and we'll all have to bid a regretful good-by to Mayfair's Leo, Lousanna and Beverly on Saturday, June 24. Pretty little Beverly has accordioned at Mayfair for nine months straight, Lousanna has just completed seven months of warbling. As for Leo, he's been at Mayfair so long they've lost count of time.

PLATE TOSSING is in order on the Shoreham Terrace currently. Juggler Dare tosses plates so high in the air that any enterprising person on the third floor of the Shoreham could reach out and grab one. Graceful Lynn and the Parker boys go in for adagio in the prodigious manner. Dancers Woods and Bray are now in their third week on the Terrace. If it were left to the Shoreham patrons, they'd stay there all summer. Advance News! The Woolford Dachshunds, those comic little canine sausages, whom you last saw at the Capitol Theater, will be on the Terrace next week. Also Myron Pearl, fencing expert and Russian dancer.

"TUNE TEST NIGHT" is on this eve at the King Cole Room. Turn in your card even if you haven't what you think is a perfect score. For even the prize winners in the K. C. R. tune tests haven't guessed them all right. Massenet's "Elegie" threw them all for a loss last week.

BRING GRAND-DADDY to the Lounge Riviera next Saturday eve. There will be champagne prizes for the best steppers of such old-time dances as the schottische and the polka. Here's where the older generation should beat the younger—unless grampy's taken to jitterbugging.

FAN MAH CASTANETS! Metallic fans used as castanets give dashing surprise to the flashy rumba of the Six Graces at the Lotus. Another spang-up number is the S. G.'s "Cigarette Dance" with all the pretties puffing smoke like chimneys. Also a big group of specialty performers, headed by Earl Hart, who does all the tricks in show business, from imitating bird calls to painting a picture upside down.

HAWAIIAN HONORS: Debut of Hi Hat's new Aloha Serenaders was signalized by an official Hawaiian delegation, headed by Delegates Samuel Wildes King, who gave the boys a handsome microphone boost. Hawaiian business magnates and representatives of the Honolulu Star-Bulletin were also on hand.

FOUR QUEENS AND A JACK (all aces) head the new Bamboo Gardens show. These bright youngsters perform in both group and specialty numbers, put on a plenty peppery show. Dancer Evelyn Barclay goes vocal this week, reveals a lovely soprano voice in "Giannina Mia."

P. S.—Try Bamboo's summer chop suey made with scallops and fresh tomatoes.

BIG BASS: Rainbow Room's Frank Flanagan has a new double-size bass. It came from Germany. Frank says he gets so much volume out of it that he believes it was made by Herr Goebbels.

MUSICIANS' PORTRAITS: Bill Dunmore (Metronome Room) struggling to un-tune his guitar amid an aura of blue verbiage, after his pal, Ken Foy, had tuned it ukelele style.

Harold Veo (Maryland Club Gardens) leading his new orchestra in a glittering, Veo-composed tango.

Frank Coviello (Mayflower Lounge) skipping musically from half of the duo-piano to the accordion and celeste.

Steve Le Sieur (Roger Smith Tavern) singing ditties that even have the G. F. T. chickens and turkeys in a dither of amazement.

Madrillon's Adelita proving that a girl can be a prize emcee.

Wally Stoefler, whose high-test dance music is filling Glen Echo's Spanish Ballroom

Rita Lopez, as she goes into her torrid rumba in the cool Neptune Room

Australian Held For Kent Shooting

London, June 13 (AP).—Ledwedge Vincent Lawlor, Australian, was held for trial without bail today on the accusation that he twice fired shots near residences of the British royal family.

Lawlor was accused of firing a shot through the window of the Princess Royal, sister of King George and wife of the Earl of Harewood, on June 4, and of shooting his rifle one day later near the Duchess of Kent, the King's sister-in-law, as she was leaving her Belgrave Square home.

Building Jump Hurdles Usual May Decline

Washington Is Fourth Of 20 Leading Cities For 5-Month Volume

New York, June 13.—Building construction scored a sharp contra-seasonal increase during May. The total valuation of permits issued in 215 cities of the United States during the month reached $111,507,630, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. With March excepted, this was the largest since last July, and the highest May total since 1931. Last month's figure compared with $95,268,241 in April, an advance of 17 per cent. The usual seasonal movement for this period is a drop of about 6.5 per cent. Contrast with the $77,606,469 for May a year ago revealed an increase of 43.7 per cent.

For the 214 cities, excluding New York, permits for May were valued at $95,621,446, against $76,577,262 during April and $63,629,368 for the corresponding 1938 month, representing increases of 24.9 and 50.3 per cent, respectively. New York permits aggregated $15,886,184, a drop of 15 per cent from the $18,690,979 for April, but a rise of 13.7 per cent above the $13,977,101 recorded in May last year.

Group totals of building permit values for 215 cities for May this year, together with percentage gains over May last year, are shown in the following table:

Five-Month Rise 13.8 Per Cent

Estimated building expenditures for the first five months of 1939 for the 215 cities were $500,477,439, as compared with $439,924,079 for the same 1938 period, a gain of 13.8 per cent. The cumulative total for New York, amounting to $102,689,284, was still under the comparable 1938 figure, the decrease being 33.2 per cent. Outside of New York, however, the building volume for the five months reached $397,788,155, an increase of 39 per cent above the like five months of 1938.

Cotton Futures Advance With Bad Weather

New York, June 13 (AP).—The weather map provided the main guide in the cotton futures market today. With selling pressure not particularly active, prices responded with net gains of 5 to 9 points to fair demand.

Stimulating buying were reports of unfavorable weather in many sections of the South. Most traders figured that tomorrow's weekly Government weather survey would prove a bullish factor.

A deterrent to vigorous market action either way was seen by analysts in continued uncertainty in the trade over what cotton legislation would flower out of present Congressional discussions.

Considerable outside buying orders appeared, plus consistent professional absorption. Trade price fixing and Wall Street demand contributed to the rise.

Stock Selling Schemes Result In 11 Indictments

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday the return of an indictment by the Federal grand jury for the Western District of Virginia sitting at Lynchburg charging six individuals with violating the mail fraud statute and the securities act of 1933. The indictment named as defendants Walter P. Spielberger, Roland H. Spielberger and Catherine E. Wheeler, alias C. E. Wheeler, alias Mrs. Walter P. Spielberger, all of Oklahoma City, officers, directors and trustees of the various companies involved; Vergil P. Wilson, alias V. P. Wilson, of Tulsa, Okla., attorney for such companies, and Carter E. Graves, alias C. E. Graves, of Charlottesville, and Charles M. Cox, formerly of Roanoke, salesmen for one of the companies. The indictment charged that the defendants had devised a scheme and artifice to defraud numerous persons, including residents of Virginia, through the sale of units of beneficial interest in the Cimarron Petroleum Trust, a trust formed under the laws of Oklahoma.

"Doodlebug" Scheme

The Department of Justice and the SEC reported that the Federal grand jury in Detroit returned an indictment against William B. Burbank, William M. Guest and Producers Associates, Inc., for violations of the fraud and registration provisions of the securities act of 1933, the mail fraud statute and conspiracy in connection with the sale of fractional, undivided interests in oil and gas rights by Producers Associates, of which Burbank was president. Guest, it was charged in the indictment, used a so-called "doodlebug" which was represented as being able to locate subterranean deposits of oil and gas.

Also reported yesterday was the indictment of Mrs. Ethel Pitt Donnell and Robert D. Beckett by a Federal grand jury in Indianapolis on charges of fraud in connection with the sale of securities of American Terminals and Transit Co. and Green River Valley Terminal Co. The two defendants are in custody in default of $10,000 bail.

New York, June 13.—An effort by the colorful Cuban millionaire and former diplomat, Oscar B. Cintas, to force a change in management of the huge American Car & Foundry Co. was disclosed today.

Cintas, who was Ambassador to Washington in the closing year of Gerardo Machado's presidency of Cuba, was reported to have sent letters to stockholders of the company, soliciting their proxies to effect changes in the management by vote at the annual meeting July 13.

The letter stated that Cintas is the largest individual holder of American Car & Foundry shares and asserted that the company's management is "inadequate and inefficient."

Specifically, Cintas deplored the company's alleged failure to obtain "recent business placed by state railways of Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil and other South American countries."

The letter said: "Although very substantial financial aid was available from the Export-Import Bank, which would have assumed its share of the credit risk as well, Car & Foundry was obliged to turn down this profitable business because of lack of working capital."

Cintas, who has lived in New York much of the time since the overthrow of Machado in 1933, is in Havana at present. He is expected back in New York next Monday.

To the Cintas charges, Charles J. Hardy, A. C. & F. president, replied late today:

"Mr. Cintas is not the largest single stockhold r of our company. He was formerly connected with the export departments of both our company and American Locomotive Co. In July, 1938, we found it necessary, in the best interests of our company, to sever its connection with it.

"A particular grievance of his w s our unwillingness to grant long-term credit to foreign countries whose financial condition did not warrant such credit.

"In a nutshell, Mr. Cintas' present attitude seems to me to be that of a discharged employe, disgruntled because of his separation from the pay roll, and now seeking reprisal for such separation."

May Gold Imports Push U. S. Total To New High Mark

By the Associated Press.

Gold imports totaled $429,440,157 in May, and helped push the Treasury's gold stocks above $16,000,000,000.

The Commerce Department said that the May imports, although large, were nearly $200,000,000 below the April total. Later reports on a weekly basis indicated the flow of gold from Europe to this country has dropped off still further in June.

May imports included $41,650,800 from Belgium; $40,449,352 from the Netherlands; $302,667,382 from England; $12,097,718 from Canada, and $10,931,154 from Japan.

Silver imports, which were in about the usual amount, totaled $6,151,676, and included $1,017,099 from England; $644,312 from Canada; $3,227,906 from Mexico and $493,528 from Peru.

The month's exports of the metals amounted to $35,954 of gold and $611,386 of silver.

Stock Prices Yield in Light Trading Many Leading Issues at Bargain Level Volume Not Enough to Pay Expenses

New York, June 13.—Writing without the benefit of the latest studies on semantics, one would be forced to say that today's stock market was as discouraging as those that went immediately before. Prices eased an average of 0.26 point and the volume on the big board was only 531,870 shares, which is not enough to pay a living wage to Wall Street as now constituted, but might suffice some day in the future when the benefits of sweet reform have turned the financial district back to the horse and buggy days.

But if we must discuss today's stock market in terms prescribed by Stuart Chase and approved by the TNEC we can say that stocks reached a level where investors were able to secure bargains at an advantage of 0.26 point from the day before and that trading, which would have been nil had it been a legal holiday, boomed upward to 531,870 shares and everyone was extremely happy.

Those who may wish to buy Chrysler, American Telephone, duPont or Westinghouse will be pleased to know they may do so now at a saving of approximately $100 per 100 shares; this amount representing the saving (not hoarding) which they gained by not buying on Monday. If this keeps up, investors may save thousands by not buying.

Business Hopes

But strange as it may seem, nonconformist Wall Street still clings to the hope that business will so improve that it can forget semantics, and other antics, and talk without embroidery about how it pays to be a bull on America. At the moment it doesn't pay very much because in the game of trying to make an honest dollar the house wants too much of a cut, the staff is encouraged to get ugly and the general atmosphere is one of a Kentucky feud.

There was no treaty of peace today and the market showed it. Investors took cognizance of the rioting in Milwaukee where 13 were injured when office workers of the Allis-Chalmers manufacturing plant tried to go to work.

Indications from Washington are that there will be no revision of the Wagner labor law at this session, but there is a slight chance that Congress will order an investigation of the National Labor Relations Board. It has investigated almost everything else so there is no good reason why the NLRB should escape, particularly as many of the Government's loyal employes feel that this board has given the whole business of Government service a black eye.

While the motor stocks were weakening today there were few features of strength. One of the few was Commonwealth & Southern preferred, which jumped 4 points and was moderately active. Strength was based on the prospect of legislation to provide the TVA with funds to buy the Tennessee properties of Commonwealth & Southern.

Hot Dogs Yield Limelight

Gobel, which was so active Monday following the hot dog picnic at Hyde Park, slumped back again almost to the oblivion it held before. The stock closed unchanged after opening at its high for the year, but the excitement was all gone. Those who bought on the basis of the picnic are wondering now what they will do with the shares, but at least they won't have to fear an SEC investigation.

Weakness in Telephone accompanied Washington reports that the Federal Communications Commission is considering a compromise in order to stave off a minority report on its Telephone investigation. The investigation cost the country $1,500,000, took two years and at the time it didn't appear to have accomplished anything.

Oil stocks were higher, this group being the only one to average up for the day. This reflected increases in gasoline prices posted throughout the country during the last week or two.

Bonds Dull and Irregular

Bond trading on the stock exchange was dull today and prices were irregularly lower as the down trend was led by the speculative rails and closely followed by the better grade carrier liens. The index of 30 bonds dropped 0.19 point to 86.86. Volume on the exchange amounted to only $4,640,000 par value, compared with $5,010,000 on Monday and $7,140,000 a week ago.

United States Government securities were off all along the line at the closing of the exchange, but over-the-counter dealings saw all but one issue even up or pass its 4.30 bid and asked quote of Monday. Gains were very small, however, most issues just barely passing their quotations for the previous day.

Panama 5s Active

Foreign bonds were highly irregular. Panama 5s of '63 (stamped) was the most active foreign issue on the big board, trading $41,000 par value for a net gain of 5½ points, closing at 64. Bulgarian 7s of '67 jumped 2⅛ points on the sale of a single bond and Chinese Railway 5s of '51 gained 1⅝. Japanese issues were soft, the 6½s of '54 dropping 1¾ points. Tokyo issues were also lower, the 5½ of '61 dropping a full point. Cordoba Province 7s of '42 jumped 8 points to 77.

The averages showed an unimportant rise in industrial liens. The Lorillard debenture 5s of '51 gained 1⅛ to 128, National Dairy debentures were up and Standard Oil debentures were firm. Central Foundry convertible 5s of '41 jumped 3½ points. Canadian Pacific issues were lower, Chicago & Eastern Illinois 5s of '51 were off 1. Northern Pacific issues were off, the 4s of '97 dropping 1⅝. Pennsylvania Railroad convertible 4¼ of '52 declined 1¾ points and Southern Pacific issues were lower. Wheeling & Lake Erie consolidated 4s of '49 advanced 2⅝ points to 113⅝.

Wheat Rallies After Drop to Six-Week Low

Strength in Corn and Rye Aid Upturn In Final Trading

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 13.—A temporary wheat price slump of about a cent a bushel to the lowest level in almost six weeks today uncovered enough resting purchase orders to reverse the market's course and cause a strong rally implemented by the covering buying of previous "short" sellers.

Comparative strength in other grains, particularly corn and rye, and in wheat at Winnipeg helped to bolster confidence in Chicago values while reports of stem rust spread as far north as southern Nebraska and prospects of fair and warmer weather for Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas added to the support.

Early lows of 72¼ and 73⅛ for July and September contracts were erased quickly and the market closed unchanged to ⅛ lower compared with yesterday's finish, July 73⅛@73¼, September 73¾@73⅞. Corn finished ⅜@⅝ higher, July 49⅝, September 51¼; oats ¼@⅜ up; rye 1⅛@1⅝ higher and lard 3 to 8 lower.

May Air Travel On T. & W. Lines Sets New Record

An all-time record for May traffic was established last month by Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., with a peak load of nearly 9,000,000 passenger miles operated over the coast-to-coast system of the airline, an increase of 30 per cent over April and 36 per cent over May, 1938.

The report showed that 14,919 passengers were carried over 1,039,637 miles, for a total of 8,962,392 passenger miles for the month. This represented an increase of 13.0 per cent over April in actual miles flown, and an increase of 36.05 per cent in volume of traffic. It was also the biggest flying month in the airline's history, with more than 17,000,000 seat miles scheduled.

The upswing in traffic, which has been general throughout the air transport industry, was believed partly due to the opening of the New York World's Fair, which has drawn thousands of airline passengers from all parts of the counary, and also the expanded service which has raised T. W. A.'s monthly operations to the largest in its history.

United Air Lines Gain

A total of 12,648,400 revenue passenger miles was reported yesterday by United Air Lines for its entire New York-Chicago-Pacific Coast and Seattle-San Diego system, an increase of 28 per cent over the 9,908,671 revenue passenger miles flown in May of last year. Last month's air traffic on United represented a gain of 26 per cent over the 10,057,299 revenue passenger miles recorded during April of this year.

U. S. Incomes Hold Above A Year Ago

But March Upturn After 4-Month Decline Was Only Temporary

New York, June 13.—The upturn in the national income produced in the United States which occurred in March after four months of decline proved to be only temporary, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. In April, the national income dropped back to the February level. It amounted to $4,552,000,000 in April as against $4,793,000,000 in March.

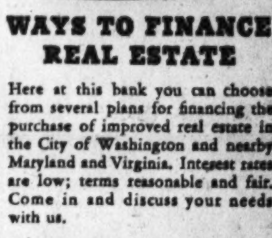

The national income in April, however, remained above the level of a year ago for the sixth consecutive month. It was 9.6 per cent larger than in April last year, when it amounted to $4,152,000,000. The increase over a year ago, however, was smaller than in any previous month of this year. This is shown by the fact that the national income in the first four months totaled $18,904,000,000 this year as against $17,035,000 last year, an increase of 11.0 per cent.

Preliminary information indicates that the national income in May showed some recovery from the April slump. Prices held relatively firm in May and mine output was apparently larger than in April as the result of the settlement of the strike in the bituminous fields. The curtailment of coal output in April was one of the major factors accounting for the decline in the national income.

It is questionable, however, whether any increase in the national income which may have occurred in May will be greatly extended in June. The prospect is, however, that the national income in June will be larger than a year ago, as was apparently the case in May. There is, consequently, no question now that the national income in the first half of 1939 will prove to be considerably larger than in the first half of 1938.

It is possible, however, that this gain in the first half will be offset by a decrease during the last half of this year. At the present time, there is little indication that the national income during the last six months will expand to the same extent as it did during the same period last year. The present prospect is, therefore, that the national income in the last half of 1939 will be smaller than during the same period of 1938.

TIME Sometimes Changes a WILL

NO ONE can foresee the events or changed conditions of the future : . . the birth or death of an heir, or the remarriage of interested parties, and other contingencies.

Therefore a WILL should be reviewed periodically by you and your attorney and amended to fit altered circumstances. If changed conditions have produced a question in your mind, a Trust company, with its long and specialized experience in dealing with such eventualities, may give you and your attorney practical help and guidance in solving your problems.

Your attorney's aid is essential to the proper drawing and revising of your WILL. And because of its nearly half a century of Trust practice, choice of American Security as your trustee and executor, assures the careful carrying out of its provisions.

We extend a cordial invitation to you and your attorney to discuss your estate problems with our Trust Officer.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"It is astonishing to see how one person can destroy a certain system and at the same time to see another person get absolute poetry and beauty by using the same identical system," says Elsie Gray, author of "The Human Side of Bridge."

"In contract new and mysterious situations arise in each deal. The very rule which governs the perfect play of one hand will prove itself a failure if applied another time even if it is used under similar circumstances. Some of the most spectacular plays have been achieved by tearing down all principles of system; these plays are made by quick, smart aggressive people."

A cardinal principle of contract play is to conserve one's resources and manage them with thrift and dispatch. The wasteful spending of tricks indulged in by unskilled or wanton players is heartily despised by competent dummy-handlers. But every one of them would applaud today's declarer for extravagantly throwing a winner on a winner to safeguard his contract.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

	♠ -- ♡ J 9 7 3 ◇ A K ♣ K Q J 7 3 2
♠ Q J 8 ♡ A 4 ◇ Q J 10 9 5 4 2 ♣ 9	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ 10 9 7 6 4 3 ♡ 8 5 ◇ 6 ♣ 10 8 6 4
	♠ -- 5 2 ♡ K Q 10 6 2 ◇ 8 7 3 ♣ A 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ◇	3 ◇	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ◇

Unfortunately in actual play like a great many of us, he failed to make use of the brilliant opportunity and went set.

West led the queen of diamonds; South won with the ace and believing he had more than enough high cards with which to make his contract he immediately led a trump. Alas, West grabbed the heart ace and shot another diamond which his partner ruffed. The slam was set one.

How could declarer have made it?

South could have safeguarded his contract by the simple precaution of discarding the diamond king from dummy before trying the trumps.

He wins the diamond lead with the ace but instead of playing trumps right away he should cash the spade king, enter his hand with the club ace and lead the spade ace, throwing away the superfluous and dangerous diamond king. Now when trumps are led if West wins and shoots a diamond dummy's heart nine will take care of the situation.

Declarer has a clew to the hazard in the diamond situation from West's interference bid. West need not have as many as seven diamonds, of course, but it is declarer's duty to protect himself against any eventuality. Had East held a doubleton diamond. South's play would have cost nothing.

Strople says that tickets to the Fair will be on sale through his organization until Thursday evening. These may be obtained at 1422 F street northwest. The party going to the Fair under A. F. G. Saying that it anticipates possible dismissals because of the reorganization of the Government under Orders 1 and 2, the United Federal Workers of America has asked the Civil Service Commission to take an additional step to guarantee dismissed employes preference in new jobs.

Under the present rules employes without Civil Service status would not be eligible for re-employment if dismissed on Civil Service jobs, the U. F. W. A. pointed out.

"To remedy this situation the U. F. W. A. proposes that an executive order be issued enabling these employes to acquire Civil Service itive examination, provided they have worked for the Government six months and are recommended by their supervisors. This would enable these employes to be re-employed anywhere in the service if they are dismissed as the result of reorganization. There is ample authority for such an order. The order would not deprive workers of any privileges or rights they now have," it was stated.

Happy traveling! The Postoffice Department's philatelic truck, which is out to acquaint the American public with the service performed by that great agency of Government, is now in the vicinity of the New York World's Fair, where hundreds of thousands of persons from all sections of the Nation can have a look. The truck has an outstanding exhibit of stamps and is equipped to show how stamps are handled from the printing to the lick that sends a letter on its way. But happily for the slight crew on the truck is the itinerary that within a month, possibly, will send them motoring along through the cool byways of the New England coast.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't care what anybody says, I believe that sometimes too much education ain't good for you. A friend of mine, Blatt Dabbers, has a Flea Circus and he says he trained one flea to dance, pull a little carriage, turn flips and do a lot of other things. It finally got so educated and big headed . . . it wouldn't even eat at the same dog with the other fleas.

My Uncle Otha studied for marriage all his life. For 20 years he learned all the little attentions he'd have to know to make a wife happy. Then he got married. And two weeks later Grandmaw met his bride on the street, and said, "Dodey, you look like you been cryin'? It ain't your husband, is it? He's the most thoughtful man in Van Buren."

Dodey said, "Yes, I know. But I ain't happy. In public Otha helps me off with my coat, brings me a chair and a pillow and then kisses me. After them things, I can't convince anybody he's my husband!"

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

The Yearling

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

"A dead dog and no bear, eh?" she called.

"Not dead yit. Git me water and rags and the big needle and thread."

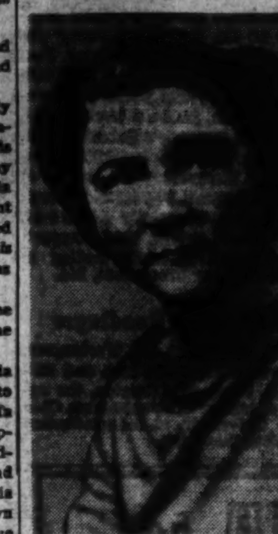

She rose quickly to help. Jody was always amazed at the capability of her great frame and hands when there was trouble. Penny laid old Julia down on the veranda floor. She whimpered. Jody bent to stroke her head and she bared her teeth at him. He trailed his mother disconsolately. She was tearing an old apron into strips.

"You kin fetch the water," she told him, and he scurried to the kettle.

Penny returned to the veranda with an armful of crocus sacks to make a bed for the hound. Ma Baxter brought the surgical equipment. Penny unwrapped his blood-soaked shirt from the dog and bathed the deep gashes. Old Julia made no protest. She had known claws before. He sewed the two deepest cuts and rubbed pine gum into all of them. She yelped once and then was silent as he worked. A rib, he said, was broken. He could do nothing for that, but if she lived, it would mend. She had lost much blood. Her breath came short. Penny gathered her up, bed and all.

It was good to clear the swamp at last and come into the open pine woods. Even the scrub that followed after for a mile or two, seemed light and penetrable. Pushing through the low scrub oaks, the scrub palmettos, the gallberry bushes and the ti-ti, was less laborious than crossing the swamp. It was late afternoon when the high pines of Baxter's Island showed ahead. The procession filed down the sand road from the east and into the clearing. Rip and Perk ran ahead to the hollowed cypress watering trough kept for the chicking in her lap.

MA BAXTER DEMANDED, "Now where you carryin' her?"

Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

"To the bedroom. I got to watch her tonight."

"Not to my bedroom, Ezra Baxter. I'll do for her what's got to be done, but I'll not have you poppin' in and outen the bed all night, wakin' me. I didn't half sleep, last night."

"Then I'll sleep with Jody and bed Julia there," he said. "I'll not leave her alone in no shed tonight. Fetch me cold water, Jody."

He carried her to Jody's room and laid her in the corner on the pile of sacking. She would not drink, or could not, and he opened her mouth and poured water down her dry throat.

"Leave her rest now. We'll go do our chores."

The clearing possessed this evening a strange coziness. Jody gathered the eggs from the hay-mow, milked the cow and turned the calf in to her, and cut wood for his mother. Penny, as always, went to the sink-hole with a wooden ox-yoke supporting two wooden buckets over his thin shoulders. Ma Baxter cooked supper of poke-greens and drier cow-peas. She fried a frugal slice of the fresh pork.

"A piece o' bear meat 'd go mighty good tonight," she lamented.

Jody was hungry but Penny had little appetite. He left the table twice to offer Julia food, which she rejected. Ma Baxter rose heavily to clear the table and wash the dishes. She asked for no details of the hunt. Jody longed to talk of it, to cast away the spell of the tracking, and the fight, and the fear that had struck him. Penny was silent. No one noticed the boy and he dipped deeply into the dish of cow-peas.

The sun set red and clear. Shadows lay long and black in the Baxter kitchen.

Penny said, "I'm wore out. I could do with bed."

Jody's feet were raw and blistered from the cowhide shoes.

"Me, too," he said.

"I'll set up a whiles," Ma Baxter said. "I ain't done much today, excusin' fret and worry, and mess with the sausage."

PENNY AND JODY went to their room. They undressed on the side of the narrow bed.

"Now if you was big as your Ma," Penny said, "we couldn't lay in it without somebody fell on the floor."

There was room enough for the two thin, bony bodies. The red faded from the west and the room was dusky. The hound slept and whimpered in her sleep. The moon rose, an hour past the full, and the small room lay in a silver brightness. Jody's feet burned. His knees twitched.

Penny said, "You wakeful, son?"

"I cain't stop walkin'."

"We went a fur piece. How you like bear-huntin', boy?"

"Well—" he rubbed his knees. "I like thinkin' about it."

"I know."

"I liked the trackin' and the trailin'. I liked seein' the saplins' broke down, and the ferns in the swamp."

"I know."

"I liked old Julia, bayin' now and agin——"

"But the fightin's right fearsome, ain't it, son?"

"Hit's mighty fearsome."

"Hit's sickenin', the dogs gittin' bloodied and sich as that. And son, you ain't never seed a bear kilt. But mean as they be, hit's someway pitiful when they go down and the dogs tears their throats and they cry out jest like a person, and lay down and die before you."

Father and son lay in silence.

"If the wild creeturs'd only leave us be," Penny said.

"I wisht we could kill 'em all off," Jody said. "Them that steals offen us and does us harm."

"'Tain't stealin' in a creetur. A creetur's got his livin' to make and he makes it the best way he kin. Same as us. Hit's panther nature and wolf nature and bear nature to kill their meat. County lines is nothin' to them, nor a man's fences. How's a creetur to know the land's mine and paid for? How's a bear to know I'm dependin' on my hogs for my own rations? All he knows is he's hongry."

JODY LAY STARING into the brightness. Baxter's Island seemed to him a fortress ringed around with hunger. Now in the moonlight eyes were shining, red and green and yellow. The hungry would dart into the clearing with swift forays, and kill and eat and slink away again. Polecats and 'possums would raid the hen-roost, wolf or panther might slay the calf before daylight, old Slewfoot might come again to murder and feed.

"A creetur's only doin' the same as me when I go huntin' us meat," Penny said. "Huntin' him where he lives and beds and raises his young uns. Hit's a hard law, but it's the law. 'Kill or go hongry.'"

Yet the clearing was safe. The creatures came, but they went away again. Jody began to shiver and could not tell why.

"You cold, son?"

"I reckon."

He saw old Slewfoot wheel, and slash and snarl. He saw old Julia leap and be caught and crushed, and hold on, and then fall away, broken and bleeding. But the clearing was safe.

"Move close, son. I'll warm you."

He edged closer to his father's bones and sinews. Penny slipped an arm around him and he lay close against the lank thigh. His father was the core of safety. The clearing was safe, and his father fought for it, and for his own. A sense of snugness came over him and he dropped asleep. He awakened once, disturbed. Penny was crouched in the corner in the moonlight, ministering to the hound.

PENNY SAID at breakfast, "Well, it's trade for a new gun, or court trouble."

Old Julia was better. Her wounds were clean, without swelling. She was exhausted from loss of blood and wanted only to sleep. She had lapped a little milk from the gourd Penny held for her.

"How you aim to buy a gun," Ma Baxter asked, "and not money scarcely for taxes?"

"I said 'trade,'" Penny corrected.

"Ary day you git the best of a trade, I'll eat my wash-pot."

"Now, Ma, I wouldn't even crave to beat a man. But there's trades where all is satisfied."

"What you got to trade with?"

"The feice."

"Who'd have him?"

"He's a good ketch-dog."

"Good to ketch biscuits."

"You know as good as I do, the Forresters is fools for dogs."

"Ezra Baxter, do you go tradin' with the Forresters, you'll do good to come home wearin' your breeches."

"Well, that's where me and Jody is headin' for today."

Penny spoke with a firmness against which the bulk of his wife was sheer air. She sighed.

"All right. Leave me without nobody to split my wood or fetch me water or care do I drop in my tracks. Go. Take him."

"I ain't never left you without wood nor water."

Jody listened anxiously. He would rather visit the Forresters than eat.

"Jody has got to mix with men and learn the ways o' men," Penny said.

"The Forresters' is a fine place to begin. Do he learn from them, he'll learn to have a heart as black as midnight."

"He might learn from them, not to. Anyways, that's where we're goin'."

He rose from the table.

"I'll fetch water and, Jody, you go split a good bait o' wood."

"You want to tote lunch?" she called after him.

"I'd not insult my neighbors thata-way. We'll noon with them."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

World War Her Oyster

Associated Press Photos.

JEAN LACKEY, "the vagabond coed," skimmed through Washington yesterday and told of starting out in 1936 from the University of Wisconsin for a round-the-world trip with $1 and returning with $10,000. Stopping everywhere at the best hotels, she registered first and found jobs later. Working beauty parlors, writing scenarios, and lecturing were some. Most amazing was a trick she does with a cigarette; blowing a smoke ball that lights wherever she chooses and explodes in a tiny gust of smoke. Her demonstration would distract anyone!

Rail Surgeons Hear How Hoboes Die

Victims Don't Mean To Nap on Track, Convention Is Told

That napping on a railroad track is dangerous would seem to be self-evident but a doctor attending the forty-second annual meeting of the Association of Surgeons of the Southern Railway System asserted yesterday that the practice continues to bring him—and the undertaker—many patients.

"They're usually hoboes," said Dr. W. H. Blake, of Sheffield, Ala., "and it happens this way most of the time: The hobo is walking the ties, waiting for a freight to come along. He comes to a grade and, knowing that means the train will slow down, he sits down on the rail to wait.

"He has no intention of falling asleep but slumber is often beyond one's control. Eventually, just as he'd hoped, the train comes along and there is an accident."

Dr. Blake, a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, addressed the association's opening scientific session at the Willard Hotel on skull fractures and brain injuries. He stressed that even the most hopeless appearing head injuries often yield to proper treatment, citing the case of a man who recovered completely after a 6-inch length of shotgun barrel had been removed from his brain.

Principal guest speaker at the opening of the three-day meeting was S. R. Prince, general counsel of the Southern Railway, who urged members to support pending legislation in Congress to aid railroads, attacked the Florida canal project as wasteful and sounded a warning against regimentation of the medical profession.

The delegates were welcomed to Washington by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Hungary Pays $9,828 on Debt, Asks Settlement Plan Approval

Secretary Morgenthau Willing to Discuss Arrangments for Rumania to Meet War Obligations Totaling $64,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Hungary made a token payment of $9,828.16 yesterday on her war debt to the United States and at the same time expressed the hope that Congress would give favorable consideration to her offer of debt settlement made last year.

Secretary Hull expressed gratification at the payment and recalled that President Roosevelt had recommended the Hungarian offer to Congress "with an expression of the belief that it represented a noteworthy wish and effort of the Hungarian government to meet its obligations to this Government."

Hungary offered in February, 1938, to pay her debt—originally $1,685,000—minus all interest, and asked a deduction of $478,000 already paid on interest and principal.

Congressional finance committees have not reported on the offer.

The State Department also published yesterday an exchange of notes between Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, and Radu Irimescu, Rumanian Minister, in which Welles said Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau would be glad to discuss with the minister Rumania's offer of debt settlement made last month.

The Rumanian Minister had asked that an appropriate authority be named before whom he could appear and submit the definite terms of his government's offer. Details of the offer have not been announced, but it is understood they called for scaling down of the total obligation. Rumania's debt is $64,000,000.

Welles reminded Irimescu that the trade agreement treaty prevented the Government from undertaking trade negotiations in connection with a debt settlement. The Rumanian offer said that the settlement should take into account the prospects of Rumania's trade with the United States.

Joseph Fletcher, boathouse proprietor, discovered the body of Joseph Maggenti, 28-year-old George Washington University student, above Chain Bridge. Mr. Maggenti had disappeared while wading in the river near Brookmont, Md.
